THE NATURE OF POLITICS

Bertrand de Jouvenel

Dennis Hale and Marc Landy, editors

With a new introduction by the editors and a foreword by Wilson Carey McWilliams

De Jouvenel was one of the greatest political thinkers of the 20th century. This representative selection of his essays goes to the heart of the political science enterprise, exploring its nature, its mission, and its attitude to facts, theory, and values.

ISBN: 1-56000-607-2 (paper) 276pp. $21.95

AFRICAN-AMERICAN SOCIAL AND POLITICAL THOUGHT, 1850-1920

Howard Brotz, editor

With a new introduction by the editor

Foreword by B. William Austin

This volume brings together the most characteristic and serious writings by black scholars, authors, journalists, and educators from the years preceding the modern civil rights movement. It is a comprehensive guide to the range and diversity of black thought.

ISBN: 1-56000-563-7 (paper) 641pp. $24.95

WE THE PEOPLE

The Economic Origins of the Constitution

Forrest MacDonald

With a new introduction by the author

The first major challenge to Beard's radical interpretation of the U.S. Constitution as serving the economic interests of the Framers, MacDonald's work describes the Constitution as the work of principled and prudent men and invalidates crude economic determinism.

ISBN: 1-56000-574-2 (paper) 455pp. $21.95

OSWALD SPENGLER

H. Stewart Hughes

With a new introduction by the author

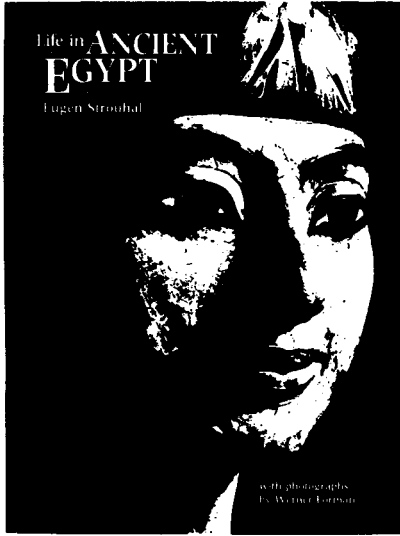

Since its publication in 1918, Spengler's Decline of the West has been the object of academic controversy. This volume offers a judicious and objective reading of Spengler that fills the gap between hypercritical invective and naive enthusiasm.

Life in Ancient Egypt

EUGEN STROUHAL

The most comprehensive exploration of everyday life in Ancient Egypt ever published

Beautifully illustrated in colour throughout, this book represents a major addition to our knowledge of Ancient Egypt. The author uses a wealth of literary, physical and artistic evidence to recreate the life of the Ancient Egyptians from conception and birth to death and burial, covering everything from the high infant mortality to the common causes of death; from the primitive working methods of farmers, fishermen and hunters to the impressive achievements of scientists, mummificators and physicians.

Also discussed are issues such as the role of women, fashion, the frequent epidemics, and the growing problems of hygiene and sanitation.

The text is complemented throughout by superb colour photographs, many taken specially for the book.
