The Undivine Comedy

Detheologizing Dante
Teodolinda Barolini

Accepting Dante's prophetic truth claims on their own terms, Teodolinda Barolini proposes a "detheologized" reading as a global new approach to the Divine Comedy. By detheologizing, the reader can emerge from this poet's hall of mirrors and discover the narrative techniques that enabled Dante to forge a true fiction.

"... a vigorous, perceptive contribution to our reading of Dante's work and to our understanding of the problems he confronted as a narrative poet. . . .

Barolini has given us a buoyant, gutsy, learned book and a wonderful journey through Dante's journeying."—Allen Mandelbaum, Wake Forest University

Dante's Vision and the Circle of Knowledge

Giuseppe Mazzotta

In a masterly synthesis of historical and literary analysis, Giuseppe Mazzotta shows how medieval knowledge systems—the cycle of the liberal arts, ethics, politics, and theology—interacted with poetry and elevated the Divine Comedy to a central position in shaping all other forms of discursive knowledge. Mazzotta offers powerful new readings of a poet who stands amid his culture's crisis and fragmentation, one who responds to and counters them in his work.

"Giuseppe Mazzotta treats many of the most debated issues in medieval thought with great sophistication. His rethinking of such themes as war, love, exile, justice, and imagination leads to a profound reconceptualization of Dante's poetry, its ambitions, and its achievements."—Rachel Jacoff, Wellesley College

Erasmus, Man of Letters

The Construction of Charisma in Print

Lisa Jardine

For many people familiar with the conventional history of the sixteenth century, the name Erasmus of Rotterdam conjures up a golden age of scholarly integrity. Lisa Jardine, however, takes a different view. As she portrays him, Erasmus self-consciously created his own reputation as the central figure of the European intellectual world.

"... a stunning example of what historical scholarship can accomplish: it will provide literary and cultural historians with a model by which to measure their future productions."—Constance Jordan, Claremont Graduate School

Framing Authority

Sayings, Self, and Society in Sixteenth-Century England

Mary Thomas Crane

Writers in sixteenth-century England often kept commonplace books, but few critics have fully appreciated the formative influence this activity had on humanism. Focusing on the discursive practices of "gathering" textual fragments and "framing" or forming, arranging, and assimilating them, Mary Crane shows how keeping commonplace books made up the English humanists' central transaction with antiquity and provided an influential model for authorial practice and authoritative self-fashioning.

"This ground-breaking and meticulous study explores materials foreign to modern taste and yet crucial to an understanding of the Renaissance mind. Crane's book is new historicism at its best."—Ann Baynes Coiro, Rutgers University

Literary Language and Its Public in Late Latin Antiquity and in the Middle Ages

Erich Auerbach

Translated from the German by Ralph Manheim

In this, his final book, Erich Auerbach traces the transformations of classical Latin rhetoric from late antiquity to the modern era and explores major concerns raised in his Mimesis: the historical and social contexts in which writings were received, and issues of aesthetics, semantics, stylistics, and sociology that anticipate the concerns of the new historicism.

Commentary and Ideology

Dante in the Renaissance

Deborah Parker

"The vast corpus of medieval commentary on Dante has for far too long been either ignored, misunderstood, marginalised, or read for supposedly significant details, which, wrenched from their context, have been made to serve the needs of modern editors and critics. . . . [Parker's book] should be read not just by Dantists but by anyone with an interest in medieval hermeneutics."

A WAY WITH WORDS

The Language of English
Renaissance Literature
Gert Ronberg

Many students find their understanding of English Renaissance literature hampered by changes in both the sound and sense of the language that have taken place in the intervening centuries. A Way With Words provides a fascinating explanation of these changes, along with a detailed demonstration of how the great Renaissance writers employed language to achieve such striking literary effects.

MEANING BY SHAKESPEARE

Terence Hawkes

"...an intellectually complex, refreshingly forthright, debate-provoking and culture-disturbing work." —Literary Review

If we have no access to any "essential" meaning nestling within Shakespeare's texts and awaiting our discovery, then what is their function and how do they work? Hawkes looks closely at A Midsummer Night's Dream, Measure for Measure, Coriolanus and King Lear among others, as concrete instances of the process through which the often covert business of "meaning by Shakespeare" takes place.

EROTIC POLITICS

The Dynamics of Desire on the English Renaissance Stage
Edited by Susan Zimmerman

Taking eroticism on the English renaissance stage as a paradigm for issues of sexuality and identity, the essays in Erotic Politics examine the nature of sexual definition and desire in early modern culture. The authors view the Renaissance stage as a decoder for erotic experience which is used to both reinforce and subvert expected sexual behavior.

THE CONVERSION OF HENRI IV

Politics, Power, and Religious Belief in Early Modern France

Michael Wolfe

Michael Wolfe offers an in-depth account of the political, diplomatic, and theological dimensions of the 1593 conversion of the Protestant Henri de Navarre. Where others have emphasized the ideological aspects of the conflict sparked by the conversion, Wolfe situates the controversy within contemporary ideas about confessional change and practice, as well as the historical traditions that defined what it meant to be French. Using pamphlets, sermons, letters, and memoranda, he traces the conversion crisis as it unfolded in the minds of the king's subjects and as it affected their loyalties and actions during the last religious wars.

While not denying the political importance of Henri IV's conversion, this book underscores the profound religious implications of the event. It puts religion back into the Wars of Religion and thereby enhances our understanding of the rise of the early modern French state.

A History of Women in the West

Georges Duby and Michelle Perrot,
General Editors

Volume III: Renaissance and Enlightenment Paradoxes

EDITED BY NATALIE ZEMON
DAVIS AND ARLETTE FARGE

The third volume in this acclaimed series draws a richly detailed picture of women in early modern Europe considering them in the context of work, marriage, and family.

At the heart of this volume is "woman" as she appears in a wealth of representations, from simple woodcuts and popular literature to master paintings; and as the focal point of a debate—sometimes funny, sometimes acrimonious—conducted in every field: letters, arts, philosophy, the sciences, and medicine. In conformity and resistance, in image and reality, women from the sixteenth through the eighteenth centuries emerge from these pages in remarkable diversity.

Writing Women in Jacobean England

BARBARA KIEFER LEWALSKI

Barbara Lewalski examines women who—as queens and petitioners, patrons and historians and poets—took up the pen to challenge and subvert the repressive patriarchal ideology of Jacobean England. Setting out to show how these women wrote themselves into their culture, Lewalski rewrites Renaissance history to include some of its most compelling—and neglected—voices.

"An important contribution to the study of English literature and feminism that will encourage further investigation of a neglected era, this book is highly recommended." —Library Journal
