

Association Officers and Council Members Nominated for 1999–2000

The Association's 1999 Nominating Committee convened at the national office on February 27 and agreed upon the following slate of Officers and Council members. Members of the Association will have an opportunity to meet the nominees at a special gathering on Thursday, September 2 at 12:30 p.m., as part of the 1999 Annual Meeting in Atlanta. Elections will be held at the Business Meeting on Saturday, September 4 at 5:30 p.m. The Annual Meeting Program will have the room location for each event.

Serving on the 1999 Nominating Committee were Chris Achen, University of Michigan; Martha Crenshaw, Wesleyan University; Donald Searing, University of North Carolina; Ruth Berins Collier, University of California, Berkeley; Mary Katzenstein, Cornell University; and Dianne Pinderhughes, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign (chair).

President-Elect (1999–2000): Robert Jervis, Columbia University

Robert Jervis is Adlai E. Stevenson Professor of International Politics at Columbia University, where he teaches courses ranging from the introductory undergraduate survey to the advanced research seminar. He previously taught at Harvard and UCLA, after receiving his B.A. from Oberlin College in 1962 and his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley in 1968. His System Effects: Complexity in Political Life (Princeton University Press, 1997) was a cowinner of APSA's political psychology section's Best Book Award. The Meaning of the Nuclear Revolution (Cornell University Press, 1989) won the Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order. He is also the author of Perception and Misperception in International Politics (Princeton University Press, 1976), The Logic of Images in International Relations (Princeton University Press, 1970; 2nd ed., Columbia University Press, 1989), and The Illogic of American Nuclear Strategy (Cornell University Press, 1984). He has coedited eight other books and authored over 80 chapters and articles.

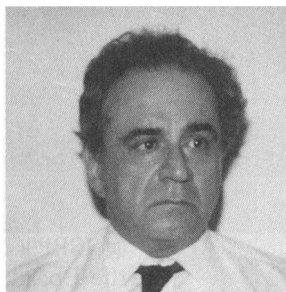

Robert Jervis

His APSA responsibilities have included service on the Council, as a vice president, and as a program chair for the 1987 Annual Meeting. He has been the conference chair of the annual meetings of the International Society of Political Psychology and the International Studies Association. He has received career achievement awards from the ISPP and ISA's security studies section. He serves on numerous Editorial Boards, is a coeditor of the Cornell Studies in Security Affairs, was a member of the National Academy of Sciences Committee on Contributions of Behavioral and Social Science to the Prevention of Nuclear War, and currently is a member of the Historical Declassification Advisory Panel for the CIA. He was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1978–79 and is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 1995–96 he was acting associate vice president of Cornell's College of Arts and Sciences and currently chairs the college's Academic Review Committee.

Vice President (1999–2000): Guillermo O'Donnell, University of Notre Dame

Guillermo O'Donnell is Helen Kellogg Professor of Government and International Studies at the University of Notre Dame, where, until recently, he was academic director of the Kellogg Institute for International Studies. He has taught at the National University of Buenos Aires, the University of El Salvador, and the University of São Paulo, and was a visiting professor at the Universities of Michigan and California, Berkeley.

O'Donnell, who received his LL.B. from the National University of Buenos Aires, and his Ph.D. in political science from Yale University, is the author of Modernization and Bureaucratic-Authoritarianism; Transitions from Authoritarian Rule: Tentative Conclusions about Uncertain Transitions, with Philippe Schmitter; Bureaucratic-Authoritarianism: Argentina 1966–1973; and Counterpoints. He is also coeditor of six books, and author of numerous articles and book chapters.

O'Donnell was president and vice president of the International Political Science Association, and chair of the Program

Committee of the World Congress of Political Science in 1982. He has served as a member of the Joint SSRC/ACLS Committee on Latin American Studies, of the Academic Council of the Latin American Program of the Woodrow Wilson Center, and of the Advisory Board of the United Nations Research Institute on Social Development. He has been a fellow of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and has held a Guggenheim fellowship.

In the past, O'Donnell's research has focused on authoritarian regimes and their demise. Presently, O'Donnell is working on comparative aspects of new democracies and on democratic theory.

Vice President (1999–2000): Virginia Sapiro, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Virginia Sapiro is the Sophonisba P. Breckinridge Professor of Political Science and Women's Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. She received her B.A. from Clark University in 1972 and her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in 1976. Her research and teaching interests over her career have included political psychology and political behavior, gender politics, American political development, feminist and democratic theory, the design and philosophy of social science research, and the state of women's studies and its contributions to social science. She received the International Society for Political Psychology's Erik Erikson Award for Early Career Contributions in Political Psychology, the American Political Science Association's Victoria Schuck Award for best book on women and politics for A Vindication of Political Virtue: The Political Theory of Mary Wollstonecraft (1992), and awards for scholarly papers from the Midwest, Southern, and Western Political Science Associations. Her current major research project involves the history of political action in the U.S. She is also the principal investigator of the National Election Studies, based at the University of Michigan.

Virginia Sapiro

Sapiro was the founding president of the American Political Science Association's Organized Section on Women and Politics. She was chair of the Program Committee for the 1998 APSA Annual Meeting and has also served as APSA secretary and has chaired the Woodrow Wilson Book Award Committee, the Nominating Committee, and the Committee on the Status of Women in the Profession. She has been on the Councils (and many committees) of the Midwest Political Science Association and the International Society for Political Psychology. She has been on the Editorial Boards of the American Journal of Political Science, American Political Science Review, American Politics Quarterly, Political Psychology, Political Science Quarterly, and Women & Politics. Her public service has included providing expert witness testimony for a United Nations meeting on the status of women in politics, and serving as a member of the Equal Justice Task Force of the State Bar of Wisconsin.

Vice President (1999–2000): Roberta S. Sigel, Rutgers University

Roberta S. Sigel is professor emerita at Rutgers University. She obtained a B.A. in history from Greensboro College (NC), an M.A. in history from Syracuse University, and a Ph.D. in history and international relations from Clark University. Her teaching career began at an extension division of Indiana University and, after an interval for raising a young family, she returned to full-time teaching at Wayne State University, the University of Detroit, SUNY-Buffalo, and Rutgers University, from which she retired as a distinguished professor of political science. She has been a guest professor at the University of Mannheim in Germany, the European Institute in Florence, Italy, and, this year, at the University of California, Irvine. At the Rockefeller Foundation in Bellagio, Italy, she was a resident scholar.

Her earliest research was in the field of American public opinion and political attitudes, she then developed an interest in the political socialization of children and, later, of adults. Her latest interests concern gender relations, and she is currently involved in a three-generations study of educated mothers and their daughters dealing with the above topic. Among her publication are articles, chapters in books, and seven books, several of which are edited or coedited volumes.

Roberta S. Sigel

Two years ago, she was an inaugural recipient of APSA's Frank J. Goodnow Award. Prior to that, she served on the Association's Council as secretary and as a vice president, and served on several other APSA committees. She is a past president of the International Society for Political Psychology and a recipient of ISPP's Nevitt Sanford Award. She also served on the Board of the Social Science Education Consortium and the National Science Foundation's Advisory Committee.

Secretary (1999–2000): Fritz W. Scharpf, Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies

Fritz Scharpf is director of the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Köln, Germany. He studied law and political science at Yale, from which he received his LL.M. in 1961, and at the University of Freiburg, from which he received his J.D. in 1964. He has taught at Yale, Chicago, and the University of Constance. In addition, Scharpf has held fellowships at the International Institute of Management at Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin and the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University.

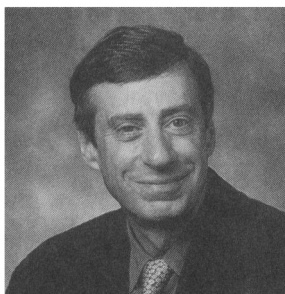

Fritz W. Scharpf

Scharpf's research interests include joint federal-state decision making, comparative political economy, and federalism and European integration. He has written extensively in German, English, French, and Italian. His English-language books include Governing in Europe: Effective and Democratic? (Oxford University Press, 1999); Governance in the European Union, coauthored with Gary Marks, Philippe C. Schmitter, and Wolfgang Streeck (Sage, 1996); and Policy-Making in the German Federal Bureaucracy, coauthored with Renate Mayntz (Elsevier, 1975).

Treasurer (1999–2001): James A. Stimson, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

James A. Stimson is Raymond Dawson Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He earned his B.A. from the University of Minnesota and his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina in 1970. He returned to Chapel Hill in 1997 after appointments to the political science faculties of SUNY-Buffalo, Florida State, and the Universities of Houston, Iowa, and Minnesota.

Stimson is a former president of the Midwest Political Science Association, former trustee of the APSA Trust and Development Board, and a current member of the APSA Council. He has authored or coauthored four books: Yeas and Nays: Normal Decision-Making in the U.S. House of Representatives, with Donald R. Matthews; Issue Evolution: Race and the Reconstruction of American Poli- tics, with Edward G. Carmines; Public Opinion in America: Moods, Cycles, and Swings; and The Macro Polity, with Robert S. Erikson and Michael B. MacKuen.

James A. Stimson

A fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences during 1994–95, he has won the Heinz Eulau Award and Gladys Kammerer Award of the American Political Science Association, the Chastain Award of the Southern Political Science Association, and the Pi Sigma Alpha Award of the Midwest Political Science Association.

Former editor of Political Analysis, he has served on the Editorial Boards of American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Political Methodology, Public Opinion Quarterly, and American Politics Quarterly, and has authored articles in the major journals of political science.

Council (1999–2001): Randall Calvert, University of Rochester

Randall Calvert is Don Alonzo Watson Professor of Political Science at the University of Rochester, where he was department chair from 1991 to 1996. He earned his B.S. from the University of Kentucky in 1975 and his Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology in 1980. Prior to joining the political science faculty at Rochester in 1987, he was associate professor of political science at Washington University in St. Louis. In 1984–85 he was a postdoctoral fellow in political economy at Carnegie-Mellon University, and he spent 1990–91 as a fellow of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences.

Randall Calvert

Calvert presently chairs APSA's Organized Section on Political Economy. He served on the section's Council from 1994 to 1996 and chaired its first Best Dissertation Award Committee in 1993. He was a Program Committee member for the 1988 APSA Annual Meeting and the 1991 Midwest Political Science Association convention, and a member, in 1993, of APSA's Heinz Eulau Award Committee. He has served on the National Science Foundation's Advisory Panel for Political Science and on the NSF's Graduate Fellowship Program evaluation panel. Together with Thráinn Eggertsson, Calvert edits Cambridge University Press's The Political Economy of Institutions and Decisions series. He is also a coeditor of Economics & Politics. He serves the Journal of Politics as an Editorial Board member, and did the same for the American Journal of Political Science from 1980 to 1982 and 1988 to 1990.

Calvert's research focus is positive political theory and American politics. He is the author of Models of Imperfect Information in Politics (1986) and also of several journal articles on positive theory and on American legislative and electoral politics published in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, and other venues. In the past decade, his published research has concentrated especially on general game-theoretic models of leadership and social institutions. His current research focus is on processes of political communication and argument, and on American and comparative constitutional politics.

Council (1999–2001): William A. Galston, University of Maryland

William Galston is a professor in the School of Public Affairs at the University of Maryland, College Park and director of the university's Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy. He was on leave from January 1993 through May 1995, during which time he served as President Clinton's deputy assistant for domestic policy. He is currently serving as executive director of the National Commission on Civic Renewal, which is co-chaired by former senator Sam Nunn and former secretary of education William Bennett and funded with a grant from the Pew Charitable Trusts. Professor Galston is the author of six books and numerous articles in the areas of political philosophy, public policy, and American politics.

Professor Galston's prior political involvement includes service as chief speechwriter for John Anderson's National Unity campaign in 1980, as issues director for Walter Mondale's presidential campaign from 1982 to 1984, and as senior advisor to then-senator Al Gore during his 1988 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. Since 1989, Galston has served as a senior advisor to the Democratic Leadership Council and the Progressive Policy Institute.

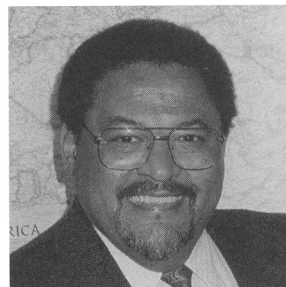

Council (1999–2001): Edmond J. Keller, University of California, Los Angeles

Edmond J. Keller is professor of political science and director of the James S. Coleman African Studies Center at the University of California, Los Angeles. He specializes in comparative politics with an emphasis on Africa. Keller received his B.A. in government from Louisiana State University in New Orleans and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin. He has taught at Indiana University, Dartmouth College, the University of Wisconsin, Xavier University (New Orleans), and the University of California, Santa Barbara. Keller has been a visiting research scholar at the Institute for Development Studies (Nairobi, Kenya), the Bureau of Educational Research (Nairobi), the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa, the Africa Institute of South Africa, and the University of California, Berkeley Institute of International Studies. Also, he has consulted widely on issues relating to African development and public policy, and, more recently, on the process of political transitions in Africa and on African regional security issues. He is currently a consultant to the National Summit on Africa on issues of democracy and human rights.

Among his activities in the profession, Keller served on the Executive Committee of the comparative politics section of the APSA from 1996 to 1998 and, since 1994, has served as the Africa specialist on the Editorial Board of Comparative Politics. During the 1995–96 academic year he served as the chair of APSA's James Madison Award Committee. In addition, Keller has served three terms as program chair for the Division on Comparative Politics of Developing Countries for APSA's Annual Meeting, most recently in 1999. He has served on the Editorial Board of the Western Political Science Association and the National Journal of Political Science; as editor of the Journal of African Policy Studies, as treasurer for the North American Chapter of the African Journal of Political Science, and as vice president and president of the African Studies Association.

Keller is the author of two monographs: Education, Manpower and Development: The Impact of Educational Policy in Kenya (1980) and Revolutionary Ethiopia: From Empire to People's Republic (1988). Professor Keller has also written more than 50 articles on African and African American politics, and has coedited three books: Afro-marxist Regimes: Ideology and Public Policy, with Donald Rothchild (1987); South Africa in Southern Africa: Domestic Change and International Conflict, with Louis Picard (1989); and Africa in the New International Order: Rethinking State Sovereignty and Regional Security, with Donald Rothchild (1996). Presently, Keller's main research is on issues of political transitions in Africa, cultural pluralism and nationalism, and conflict and conflict management in Africa.

Edmond J. Keller

Council (1999–2001): Gary King, Harvard University

Gary King is professor of government at Harvard University, where he has taught since 1987. Between 1984 and 1987 he taught at New York University. King received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1984 and his B.A. from the State University of New York, New Paltz in 1980. He has been a Guggenheim fellow, a visiting fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford University, and is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has won the Gosnell Prize (1997), the Donald Campbell Award (1997), the Eulau Award (1995), the Mills Award (1993), the Pi Sigma Alpha Award (1993, 1998), and the APSA Section on Computers and Multimedia's Research Software Award (1992, 1994, 1997), among others. He has authored or coauthored fifty journal articles and four books in political methodology and other fields of political science, including A Solution to the Ecological Inference Problem: Reconstructing Individual Behavior from Aggregate Data (Princeton University Press); Unifying Political Methodology: The Likelihood Theory of Statistical Inference (University of Michigan Press); and, with Robert Keohane and Sidney Verba, Designing Social Inquiry: Scientific Inference in Qualitative Research (Princeton University Press). He has also authored several widely used public domain statistical software packages and data sets.

King has served on the Council of the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research, on the Executive Council and as chair of the Publications Committee of the Midwest Political Science Association, as the APSA liaison to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and on the Editorial Boards of twelve scholarly journals and several NSF panels. He is currently president of APSA's political methodology section. King's research has been supported by the National Science Foundation, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization, the National Institutes of Aging, the Global Forum for Health Research, and several corporations and foundations. King also serves as director of the Harvard-MIT

Data Center and, with Micah Altman and Sidney Verba, was recently awarded a Digital Library Initiative grant (supported by NSF, DARPA, NLM, LoC, NEH, and NASA) for their Virtual Data Center project to make numerical data easier to share, find, and analyze. His homepage can be found at <http://GKing.Harvard.edu>.

Council (1999–2001): Atul Kohli, Princeton University

Atul Kohli is professor of politics and international affairs at Princeton University. His principal research interest is in the areas of comparative political economy with a focus on the developing countries. He is the author of The State and Poverty in India and Democracy and Discontent: India's Growing Crisis of Governability, and the editor of The State and Development in the Third World; India's Democracy: An Analysis of Changing State-Society Relations; State Power and Social Forces: Domination and Transformation in the Third World; and Community Conflicts and the State in India. His current research project is a comparative analysis of the politics of industrialization in South Korea, Brazil, India, and Nigeria. He is an editor of World Politics and has been the recipient of grants and fellowships from the Social Science Research Council, Ford Foundation, and Russell Sage Foundation. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley.

Council (1999–2000): George E. Marcus, Williams College

George E. Marcus is professor of political science at Williams College. He received his B.A. from Columbia University. His M.A. and Ph.D. are from Northwestern University.

He is the author, with John L. Sullivan and James E. Piereson, of Political Tolerance and American Democracy (University of Chicago Press, 1982, 1989, 1993); and, with John L. Sullivan, Elizabeth Theiss-Morse, and Sandra L. Wood, of With Malice Toward Some: How People Make Civil Liberties Judgments (Cambridge University Press, 1995), which received the award for best book in political psychology given by APSA's Section on Political Psychology. His research continues on political tolerance in the United States and the role emotion plays in democratic politics.

George E. Marcus

He is coeditor, with Russ Hanson, of The Democratic Electorate Reconsidered (Penn State University Press, 1993), as well as a contributor to a number of other edited volumes. He was cofounder and, for 12 years, coeditor of Political Methodology. He was executive director of the International Society of Political Psychology from 1992 to 1996. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Roper Center, on the Editorial Board of Political Psychology, and is the current chair of APSA's Section on Political Psychology. He has received grants from the National Science Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Sloan Foundation, the Ford Foundation, and the Carnegie Corporation, and held a residency at the Rockefeller Foundation Center in Bellagio, Italy.

Note: Marcus will finish the Council term of James Stimson who has been nominated for Association Treasurer.

Council (1999–2001): David Rayside, University of Toronto

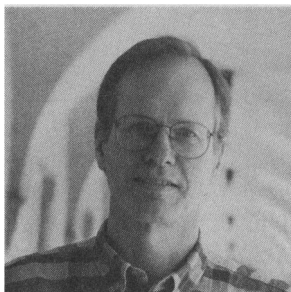

David Rayside is professor of political science at the University of Toronto. He was raised in Montreal and received his B.A. from Carleton University in Ottawa in 1969. He went to the University of Michigan as a Woodrow Wilson Fellow and a Canada Council Doctoral Fellow and graduated with a Ph.D. in 1976. He has been a member of Toronto's political science department since 1974 and, for most of that time, has also held an appointment at the University's founding college—University College—where he served as vice-principal from 1993 to 1997.

Rayside is the author of On the Fringe: Gays and Lesbians in Politics (Cornell University Press, 1998), as well as a number of articles on the politics of sexual diversity in Canada, Britain, and the United States. This recent body of work explores the challenges facing a social movement as it engages mainstream political processes in three quite different national contexts.

Rayside's present research focuses on political clashes over recognizing same-sex relationships in Canada's two most westerly provinces and the Pacific Northwest of the United States. One aspect of that research explores the embrace of such issues by the labor movement. Before taking up issues of sexual orientation, Rayside wrote A Small Town in Modern Times (McGill-Queen's University Press, 1991), an ethnographic examination of social class, language, and gender in a small Ontario town. Rayside has also been involved in activism and public debate over issues related to policing and homelessness.

Rayside served on the Board of the Canadian Political Science Association from 1981 to 1983, and on Board committees examining gender inequity and part-time employment in the profession. He helped found the Canadian Lesbian and Gay Studies Association in 1994–95. Within the APSA, he served as a member of the Committee on the Status of Lesbians and Gays in the Profession from 1995 to 1997, in which capacity he helped draft the Committee's report to the Association.

David Rayside

Council (1999–2001): Christine Marie Sierra, University of New Mexico

Christine Marie Sierra is associate professor of political science at the University of New Mexico. She received her B.A., with honors, from the University of Texas. Her M.A. and Ph.D. are from Stanford University. Sierra also served as academic coordinator of the Chicana/o Studies Program at the University of New Mexico from 1994 to 1996. Prior to her faculty appointment at UNM, she taught at Colorado College in Colorado Springs.

Sierra teaches and researches in the areas of American race and ethnic politics, Latino/a politics, and women in American politics. Her publications include two co-edited books: Chicana Voices: Intersections of Class, Race, and Gender (University of New Mexico Press, 3rd printing, 1993) and Chicana Critical Issues (Third Woman Press, 1993). Her other publications focus on Mexican American political activism on immigration policy, Hispanic politics in New Mexico, and the politics of Chicana and Latina women in the United States. Sierra has held a postdoctoral fellowship from the Ford Foundation and has been a guest scholar at the Brookings Institution in Washington, DC. Most recently, she was a visiting scholar in Mexican American Studies at the University of Arizona. As an expert in Latino/a politics, she has served as a consultant to Williams College and the University of Notre Dame on the establishment of a Latino Studies Program at each campus. She was a presidential appointee to the Good Neighbor Environmental Board, which advises the president and Congress on environmental and infrastructure needs of the U.S.-Mexico border region.

Her activities in the profession include membership on the Editorial Board of PS (1999–2001), the Committee on the Status of Latinos in the Profession (1996–98), and the Women's Caucus for Political Science's Chilly Climate and Minority Liaison committees. She also served on the selection committee for the Ralph Bunche Award for Best Book on Cultural Pluralism (1996). She is co-president-elect (with James Jennings) of APSA's Organized Section on Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (1999–2000).

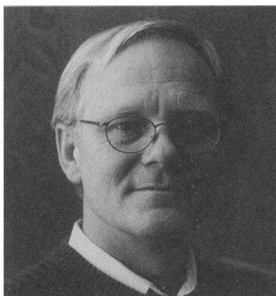

Christine Marie Sierra

Council (1999–2001): Sven Steinmo, University of Colorado, Boulder

Sven Steinmo is associate professor of political science at the University of Colorado, Boulder. Steinmo received his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley in 1987. He also received a M.P.H. from California in 1982. Steinmo served as director of the International Affairs Program at the University of Colorado from 1992 to 1995. He also directed the Conference on World Affairs there from 1995 to 1998. He is currently a member of the Steering Committee for the Council for European Studies and a member of "Team Europe" for the EU Delegation in the United States. In past years, he has served on the Nominating Committee of APSA's politics and history section and on the selection committee for the political economy section's Best Book in Political Economy Award.

Steinmo has received numerous awards for both his teaching and his writing including the 1983–84 Fulbright-

Hays Dissertation Scholarship, 1984–85 ACLS/SSRC Dissertation Research Fellowship, 1989 APSA Gabriel Almond Award for the Best Dissertation in Comparative Politics, and 1994 APSA Organized Section on Political Economy Best Book Award. He has also won several teaching awards at the University of Colorado.

Sven Steinmo

Steinmo's research, writing, and teaching range broadly in the fields of political economy, comparative politics and policy, and American government. His books include Structuring Politics (coeditor, Cambridge University Press, 1992); Taxation and Democracy (Yale University Press, 1993); and Tax Policy (editor, Elgar Press, 1998). He is currently working on his next book, The Land of Milk and Honey: A Short History of America and the People it Created.

Continuing Officers and Council for 1999–2000 will be:

President (1999–2000): Robert O. Keohane, Duke University

Robert O. Keohane is James B. Duke Professor of Political Science at Duke University. He was formerly Stanfield Professor of International Peace at Harvard University, where he served for four years as chair of the department of government. He has also taught at Swarthmore College, Stanford University, and Brandeis University. He received his B.A. from Shimer College in 1961 and his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1966. He is the author of After Hegemony: Cooperation and Discord in the World Political Economy (Princeton University Press, 1984), for which he received the second annual Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order in 1989. He is also the author of International Institutions and State Power: Essays in International Relations Theory (Westview, 1989); coauthor, with Joseph S. Nye Jr., of Power and Interdependence: World Politics in Transition (Little, Brown, 1977; 2nd ed., 1988); and coauthor, with Gary King and Sidney Verba, of Designing Social Inquiry: Scientific Inference in Qualitative Research (Princeton, 1994). He is editor or coeditor of, and contributor to, nine other books.

Between 1974 and 1980, Keohane was editor of International Organization. He has served on the Council of the American Political Science Association (1971–73); on the Woodrow Wilson Award Committee (1982); as a member of the Nominating Committee (1990–91; chair, 1990); and as first chair of the Minority Identification Program (1990–92). He was president of the International Studies Association in 1988–89. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and has held a Guggenheim fellowship and fellowships at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, the Rockefeller Foundation Center at Bellagio, Italy, and the National Humanities Center. In 1997 he was given the first Mentorship Award by the Society for Women in International Political Economy. He is married to Nannerl Overholser Keohane, professor of political science and president, Duke University.

Robert O. Keohane

Council (1998–2000): Michael C. Dawson, University of Chicago

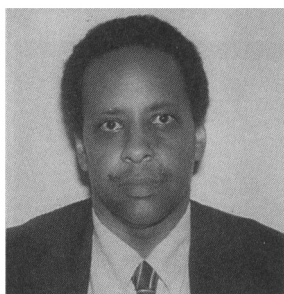

Michael C. Dawson is professor of political science and department chair at the University of Chicago. He also serves as director of the university's Center for the Study of Race, Politics, and Culture. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of California, Berkeley (B.A., 1982), he went on to earn his M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University (1985, 1986). Following an appointment to the University of Michigan from 1986 to 1992, he joined the faculty at Chicago in 1992. During 1996–97 he was a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. Dawson was co-principal investigator of the 1988 National Black Election Study and is principal investigator, with Ronald Brown, of the 1993–94 National Black Politics Study.

His research interests include the development of quantitative models of African American political behavior and public opinion, the political effects of urban poverty, and African American political ideology. Dawson's book, Behind the Mule: Race and Class in African-American Politics (Princeton University Press, 1994) was named the Book of the Year by the National Conference of Black Political Scientists. Dawson is also the author of articles on African American political behavior and race and American politics appearing in Public Culture, American Political Science Review, and The National Review of Political Science, as well as other publications.

He recently completed Black Visions: The Roots of Contemporary African American Mass Political Ideologies for the University of Chicago Press. This manuscript examines several historical trends in African American political thought, the connections between black political thought and American political thought, and then uses the survey generated by the 1993–94 National Black Politics Study to determine the presence and influence of these ideological tendencies among grassroots African Americans.

Dawson has discussed his research interests across the country during appearances on a number of shows on ABC radio in Los Angeles, NBC radio in New York, and several Chicago and Detroit affiliates of National Public Radio. Dawson has also authored and coauthored opinion page features for newspapers such as The Chicago Tribune and The Chronicle of Higher Education.

A past member of APSA's Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession, Dawson has also served as chair of APSA's Ralph Bunche Award Committee in 1998 and chair of the Division on Public Opinion and Participation for the 1996 APSA Annual Meeting.

Council (1998–2000): Luis Fraga, Stanford University

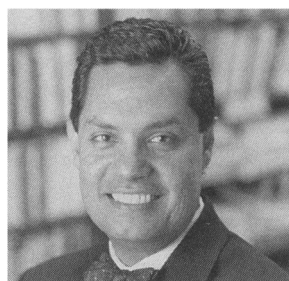

Luis Ricardo Fraga is an associate professor in the department of political science at Stanford University. He is a native of Corpus Christi, Texas. After he received his A.B., cum laude, in government from Harvard University in 1978, he did his graduate work at Rice University, from which he received his M.A. in 1981 and Ph.D. in 1984. He was previously an assistant professor at the University of Oklahoma, and was assistant and then associate professor at the University of Notre Dame. In 1989–90 he was a fellow at the Center for the Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford. From 1993–96 he was director of the Stanford Center for Chicano Research.

Professor Fraga's research interests are in American urban politics, politics of race and ethnicity, voting rights, and educational policy. He has published widely in scholarly journals including the Journal of Politics, Urban Affairs Review, Political Research Quarterly, West European Politics, and Journal of State Government. He has also published in a number of edited volumes. He is coeditor of Ethnic and Racial Minorities in Advanced Industrial Democracies (Greenwood Press, 1992). He has been an associate editor of Urban Affairs Review and was on the Editorial Boards of Political Research Quarterly and American Journal of Political Science. Professor Fraga is also coeditor, with Paula D. McClain, of a book series titled Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (University Press of Virginia).

Fraga has also been very active in professional associations. In 1998–99 he served on the Administrative Subcommittee of the Executive Council of the American Political Science Association. In 1997–98 he served as president of the Western Political Science Association. He has been chair of the Committee on the Status of Chicana/os in the Profession of the Western Political Science Association. He is also past chair of APSA's Committee on the Status of Latina/os in the Profession. He has been a section coordinator for annual meetings of the APSA, the WPSA, and the Midwest Political Science Association. He has also served as chair of the Nomination Committee and a member of the Executive Committee of the urban politics and urban policy section of APSA. In 1995 he received an award as "Distinguished Scholar, Mentor and Leader" from APSA's Committee on the Status of Latina/os in the Profession.

Fraga is currently completing two book manuscripts. In The Changing Urban Regime: Toward an Informed Public Interest, Professor Fraga analyzes the changes in the nature of politics and policy making from 1930 to 1990 in Dallas and San Antonio. In Missed Opportunities: The Politics of Schools in San Francisco, he examines the implementation of that city's desegregation consent decree and its impact on systemic school reform from 1983 to the present. His most recent publication is "Civil Rights in a Multicultural Society," coauthored with Jorge Ruiz-de-Velasco, which will appear in Controversies in Civil Rights (University Press of Virginia, 1999).

Luis Fraga

In 1993 Professor Fraga was among the first three recipients of the Lillian and Thomas B. Rhodes Prize for excellence in undergraduate teaching at Stanford University. In that year, he also received a Faculty Award "in recognition of distinguished service" to the Chicano/Latino graduating class of 1993, an award he received again in 1996 and 1997. In 1995 he was the recipient of the Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel Award for distinctive contributions to undergraduate education. In 1997 he was given the Allan V. Cox Medal for Faculty Excellence Fostering Undergraduate Research.

Council (1998–2000): Cynthia McClintock, George Washington University

Cynthia McClintock is professor of political science at George Washington University. She earned her B.A. in English from Harvard University, her M.A. in political science from the University of California, Los Angeles, and her Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She joined the political science department at George Washington in 1975. She teaches courses on comparative politics and the international relations and comparative politics of Latin America.

Her latest book, Revolutionary Movements in Latin America: El Salvador's FMLN and Peru's Shining Path (U.S. Institute of Peace, 1998), examines the variables explaining the expansion of these two revolutionary organizations. In 1981 she completed her first book, Peasant Cooperatives and Political Change in Peru (Princeton University Press), and in 1983 she coedited, with Abraham Lowenthal, The Peruvian Experiment Reconsidered (Princeton University Press). Examining democracy, revolutionary movements, and the political economy of Latin America, she has written numerous book chapters as well as articles appearing in Comparative Politics and World Politics, among other publications.

Cynthia McClintock

McClintock is currently the director of the Latin American Studies Program at George Washington and the co-convenor of the George Washington University Seminar on "Andean Culture and Politics." In the past, she served as president of the Latin American Studies Association (1994–95), the president of the Inter-American Council (1983–84), and an electoral observer in Peru (1995) and El Salvador (1991, 1994). She is the recipient of a Fulbright Lecturing/Research Award (1987) and a U.S. Institute of Peace Jennings Randolph Fellowship (1990–91).

With colleague Peter Klaren, McClintock is currently writing a textbook on Latin American politics, to be published by Westview Press. Also, with Peruvian colleague Fabian Vallas, she is carrying out research for and writing U.S.-Peruvian Relations in the Context of Globalization and the Post-Cold War Era, one of the titles in a series on U.S.-Latin American Bilateral Relations coordinated by Jorge Dominguez and Rafael Fernandez de Castro.

Council (1998–2000): Eileen L. McDonagh, Northeastern University

Eileen L. McDonagh is a professor of political science at Northeastern University, where she teaches in the fields of American political development, gender jurisprudence, and gender and politics. She received her B.A. from the University of Southern California and her Ph.D. from Harvard University. She was a recipient of the National Science Foundation Visiting Professorship for Women in 1988 and was also funded by NSF for an additional two years for her research on the nationalization of public policies in the Progressive Era. She has been a fellow at the Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College, a Mellon fellow at the Wellesley Center, and, since 1988, she has been a visiting scholar at the Murray Research Center of Radcliffe College. She received the APSA Organized Section on Women and Politics' 1994 award for the best paper presented on women and politics and the American Educational Research Association's 1986 award for the best research on women and education.

McDonagh is author of Breaking the Abortion Deadlock: From Choice to Consent (Oxford University Press, 1996). She has also written widely on historical institutionalism and gender issues, and her work has appeared in the American Political Science Review, Studies in American Political Development, Journal of Politics, American Journal of Political Science, Women & Politics, Social Politics, and many other political science and public policy journals and edited volumes. Her current work explores the relationship between gender and the state by studying how processes of modernization set parameters for women's political participation. She is also completing a project investigating the connection between the legislative and judicial dimensions of state-building processes in the Progressive Era reform period and the formulation of contemporary public policies.

Eileen L. McDonagh

McDonagh is president-elect of APSA's women and politics section. She is or has been a member of the Executive Council of APSA's Organized Section on Politics and History, the Social Science History Association, and the American Historical Association's Section on the Study of the Gilded Age and the Progressive Era.

Council (1998–2000): Nancy E. McGlen, Niagara University

Nancy E. McGlen is professor of political science and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Niagara University. She received her B.A. from Ithaca College. Her M.A. and Ph.D. are from the University of Rochester, where she was a Herbert H. Lehman Fellow. Prior to coming to Niagara in 1980, she taught at the State University of New York, Buffalo.

Among her activities in the profession, McGlen has been program chair (1991) and president (1992) of the New York State Political Science Association and program chair (1996) and president (1997) of the Northeastern Political Science Association. In addition, she has been a member of the Victoria Schuck Award Committee, the Women's Caucus for Political Science Best Dissertation Proposal Committee, the Women and Politics Section Best Paper Awards Committee, the New York State Program Committee, and the Midwest Political Science Association Program Committee. She has served, or continues to serve, as secretary and treasurer of the National Women's Caucus for Political Science and secretary/treasurer of the Northeast Women's Caucus for Political Science. McGlen is a member of the Editorial Board of Women & Politics. In addition to receiving awards for research, teaching, and service from Niagara University, McGlen was selected in 1990 for the Women's Caucus for Political Science's Honor Roll of Mentors of Distinction.

Nancy E. McGlen

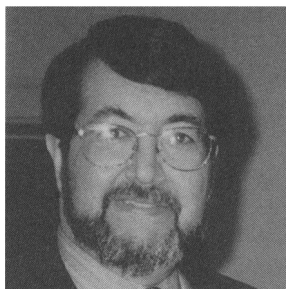

McGlen's main research has focused on women and politics in the United States and women in foreign policy. Her book, Women's Rights: The Struggle for Equality in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries, coauthored with Karen O'Connor (1983), details the efforts of the several women's movements to secure political rights for women. Women in Foreign Policy: The Insiders, coauthored with Meredith Reid Sarkees (1993), which was funded by a grant from the Center for the American Woman and Politics, examines differences between women and men in the U.S. Departments of State and Defense. Women, Politics and American Society (2nd ed., 1998), coauthored with Karen O'Connor, analyzes the barriers that prevent women from achieving political, economic, and social equality. Her most recent research is concerned with the status of women and part-timers in the profession.

Council (1998–2000): Howard J. Silver, Consortium of Social Science Associations

Howard J. Silver is the executive director of the Consortium of Social Science Associations (COSSA) in Washington, DC, a position he has held since 1988. The Consortium advocates for federal funding for the social and behavioral sciences and serves as a bridge between the research community and the Washington policy-making community. Silver previously served COSSA as its associate director for government relations from 1983–88. APSA is a founding member of COSSA.

Prior to joining COSSA, Silver was a consultant for legislative and political research, a political campaign manager, and a legislative analyst in the U.S. Department of Education. He taught political science and public policy at Washington College (MD), Trinity College (DC), Ohio State University, Lima Campus, Franklin University, and the Marion Correctional Institution in Marion, Ohio. He came to Washington in 1980 as an Institute for Educational Leadership Policy Fellow.

Silver has testified before Congress, spoken at many professional meetings on federal funding of science, and written extensively on executive-legislative relations, the federal budget process, and science policy as it affects the social and behavioral sciences.

Howard J. Silver

Elected by his science policy advocate colleagues, Silver also currently serves as chairman of the Coalition for National Science Funding, an ad hoc advocacy group for scientific and engineering societies, higher education associations, and industrial groups. He also is a member of the Board of Advisory Editors for Society and the public education committee of Research! America. His prior service includes: president, treasurer, and program chair of the APSA Organized Section on Applied Political Science; the Council of the National Capital Area Political Science Association; the Executive Committee of the Council of Professional Associations on Federal Statistics; and the Steering Committees of the National Commission on Social Studies in the Schools and the Coalition for the Advancement of Foreign Languages and International Studies. In 1998 he was elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Silver received his Ph.D. from Ohio State University. A native of New York City, his B.A. is from the City College of the City University of New York.

Council (1998–2000): J. Ann Tickner, University of Southern California

J. Ann Tickner is associate professor in the School of International Relations at the University of Southern California. She received her B.A. from London University, her M.A. in international relations from Yale, and her Ph.D. in political science from Brandeis. Before coming to USC, she taught at the College of the Holy Cross. At USC, she teaches courses on IR theory, feminist IR theory, women and global issues, and peace and conflict. Her publications include Self-Reliance Versus Power Politics (Transaction, 1987) and Gender in International Relations (Columbia University Press, 1992), as well as articles in International Political Science Review, International Studies Quarterly, Polity, and A New Handbook of Political Science, among other journals and edited books. She is presently working on a book manuscript tentatively titled Gendering World Politics.

J. Ann Tickner

She has been a postdoctoral fellow at the Center for International Affairs at Harvard University and a visiting scholar at the London School of Economics, the Australian National University, Uppsala University, Brown University, and Wellesley College. She was also the recipient of a Marshall Fund award for guest lectureships at German universities (and she will receive an honorary Ph.D. from Uppsala University in June 1999). She has served as vice president of the International Studies Association and was a member of the Program Committee for the 1995 APSA Annual Meeting. She was also a member of the 1997 Alice Paul Award Committee of the Women's Caucus for Political Science.
