

BRITAIN'S MOST EXCITING THEATRICAL MAGAZINE

GAMBIT International

The British equivalent of T.D.R. is GAMBIT International which is published in Britain by Calder & Boyars (publishers of Beckett, Ionesco, Peter Weiss, Adamov, Arrabal, David Mercer, Pinget, Robbe-Grillet, Nathalie Sarraute, William Burroughs, Henry Miller and many other best modern writers) and is edited by Robert Rietty. International in outlook, it prints complete plays, important theatrical articles and news of what is happening in the theatre. No. 10, the current issue contains two important plays, Gone for a Soldier by Nicholas Biel and Lunchtime Concert by Olwen Wymark, many articles and a review of the Paris theatre. No. 9 contains Sartre's important text Myth and Reality in the Theatre, not elsewhere available in English, and an Indian play A Touch of Brightness by Partap Sharma, banned in its own country, and much else. Now with No. 11, the magazine is getting an important facelift, a brighter appearance and an extension of scope. American subscriptions $8.50 for 6 issues either from Gambit directly, or if you prefer from the Drama Review.

visual experience is stage lighting experience

Visual perfection is not everyday fare . . . only an imaginative, integral approach to stage lighting can reach it Century's specialists are Theatre People — they see, feel and think as such — their experience is unchallenged. That's why, as illuminating engineers, they have designed the most comprehensive and the finest stage lighting and control equipment available today
