Chaplin and American Culture

The Evolution of a Star Image

Charles J. Maland

This is the first book focusing on the relationship between Chaplin and American society—a discussion of the cultural sources of the on-and-off, love-and-hate affair between Chaplin and the American public that was perhaps the stormiest in the history of American stardom. Charles Maland traces the ups and downs of Chaplin's "star image" from 1913, when he began his movie career at Mack Sennett's Keystone Studio, to the 1980s, when his "Charlie" figure emerged in an advertising campaign for personal computers. Examining the interplay between Chaplin's reputation and the vicissitudes of the American political and social climate, the book analyzes the cultural forces that led to the spectacular growth of his popularity, to the even more dramatic collapse of his reputation and his twenty-year exile in Switzerland, and finally to his restored prestige.

American Film Melodrama

Griffith, Vidor, Minnelli

Robert Lang

"The difficulty for men or the impossibility for women of living up to patriarchal society's ideal order is the very stuff of melodrama," writes Robert Lang in this daring work on what the author sees as the central genre of American film. Lang traces the development of melodrama in the first fifty years of the American cinema by offering detailed interpretations of Griffith's Way Down East, The Mother and the Law, and Broken Blossoms; Vidor's The Crowd, Stella Dallas, and Ruby Gentry; and Minnelli's Madame Bovary, Some Came Running, and Home from the Hill.

Joyless Streets

Women and Melodramatic
Representation in Weimar Germany

Patrice Petro

Patrice Petro challenges the conventional assessment of German film history, which sees classical films as responding solely to male anxieties and fears. Exploring the address made to women in melodramatic films and in popular illustrated magazines, she shows how Weimar Germany had a commercially viable female audience, fascinated with looking at images that called traditional representations of gender into question.

Allegories of Cinema

American Film in the Sixties

David E. James

From Stan Brakhage and Andy Warhol to the underground cinema and political films, David James gives a thorough account of the growth, development, and decay of nonstudio film practices in the United States between the late fifties and the mid-seventies. Unlike other scholars who discuss these practices as totally separate from Hollywood, James argues that they were developed in various kinds of dialogue or negotiation with the commercial film industry.

Shot/Countershot

Film Tradition and Women's Cinema

Lucy Fischer

Do films made by women comprise a "counter-cinema" radically different from the dominant tradition? Feminist film critics contend that women filmmakers do present from a distinctive vision, or "countershot," and Lucy Fischer argues persuasively for this view. In rich detail this book relates the idea of a counter-cinema to theories of intertextuality and locates it in the broad context of recent feminist film, literary, and art criticism. What emerges is a fascinating picture of a women's film tradition that not only addresses but reworks and remakes the mainstream cinema.

Shakespeare—
The Theater and the Book

Robert S. Knapp

Shakespeare— The Theater and the Book

Robert S. Knapp

This book explores the reasons for the lasting freshness and modernity of Shakespeare's plays, while revising the standard history of English medieval and Renaissance drama. Robert Knapp argues that changes in the authority of English monarchs, in the differentiation and integration of English society, in the realization of human figures on stage, and in the understanding of signs helped produce scripts that still compel us to the act of interpretation.

Shakespeare and the Dramaturgy of Power

John D. Cox

Through a revised study of Shakespeare's dramatic heritage in its social context, John Cox questions the idealizing view that Shakespearean drama enacts an "Elizabethan world picture" as well as the materialist view that the plays laid the foundation for modern radical ideology. Instead the author locates Shakespeare's skepticism about power in his heritage from medieval religious drama. Cox cites Augustine's City of God as the ultimate source of political realism during the Middle Ages.

The Fate of Meaning

Charles Peirce, Structuralism, and Literature

John K. Sheriff

This succinct and lucid study examines the thought of the philosopher Charles Peirce as it applies to literary theory and shows that his concept of the sign can give us a fresh understanding of literary art and criticism. John Sheriff analyzes the treatment of determinate meaning and contends that as long as we cling to a notion of language that begins with Saussure's dyadic definition of signs, meaning cannot be treated as such any more than can essence or presence.

The Contemplative Poetry of Gerard Manley Hopkins

Maria R. Lichtmann

In 1989, the centenary of his death, Gerard Manley Hopkins continues to provoke fundamental questions among scholars: what major poetic strategy informs his work and how did his reflections on the nature of poetry affect his writing? While form meant a great deal to Hopkins, it was never mere form. Maria Lichtmann demonstrates that the poet, a student of Scripture all his life, adopted Scripture's predominant form—parallelism—as his own major poetic strategy. Parallelism was to him the perfect statement of the integrity of outward form and inner meaning.

Cervantes and Ariosto

Renewing Fiction

Thomas R. Hart

Thomas Hart examines Erich Auerbach's contention that Don Quixote is not a tragedy but a comedy and suggests that Auerbach's view was shaped by his reading of Ariosto's chivalric romance Orlando furioso. He demonstrates that Cervantes shared not only Ariosto's attachment to the moral code of chivalry but also his doubts that it could be practiced effectively in the contemporary world. Cervantes and Ariosto contends that both authors shared an awareness of the gap between life as it is lived and life as it is depicted in works of imaginative literature.

The Novel Histories of Galdós

Diane Faye Urey

Benito Pérez Galdós (1843-1920) occupies a position in Spanish literature surpassed only by Cervantes, and, like him, made a major contribution to the European novel that is now becoming widely recognized. Diane Urey's findings of ambiguity, irony, and allegory in these twenty-six historical novels will revise our views of Galdós's place in European letters while offering new insights into a general theory of historical fiction.

Esthetics as Nightmare

Russian Literary Theory, 1855-1870

Charles A. Moser

As an epoch of "censorship terror" drew to a close with the end of the Crimean War, Russian intellectuals had begun expressing their desires for political, philosophical, and religious reform. Charles Moser re-creates the leading controversies over literature and art during a crucial period that saw the publication of such authors as Turgenev, Dostoevsky, and Tolstoy. He presents the doctrines of lesser known and major figures, both liberal and conservative, which influenced the development of Socialist Realism and Russian Formalism.

THE WOODEN O RETURNS,

REBUILDING SHAKESPEARE'S GLOBE

Andrew Gurr with John Orrell

Foreword by Sam Wanamaker

On April 23, 1988, work began on a momentous undertaking. The dream of generations of theatre lovers is being realized: The Globe Theatre, where Shakespeare himself acted, is being rebuilt on the south bank of the Thames. Beautifully illustrated with four specially commissioned full-color drawings by Paul Cox, Rebuilding Shakespeare's Globe tells the fascinating history of the world's most famous theatre and of the reconstruction project now underway.

REDRAWING THE LINES

Analytic Philosophy, Deconstruction, and Literary Theory

Reed Way Dasenbrock, editor

Since 1970 literary theory has interacted with the Anglo-American and Continental schools of philosophy, often engendering a spirited debate between these (presumed) rival modes of study. Close comparative examination of the Faust legend and the Biblical tale of the Fall reveals an analogous paradox in the nexus of good and evil in both stories. Identifying this paradox as a quintessential sine qua non of the Faust quest, this study traces its development through the Faust tradition's four most important literary instances: the sixteenth-century German Chapbook, and the Faust works of Christopher Marlowe, Johann W. Goethe, and Thomas Mann.

Opening of the American Mind

RACE, ETHNICITY AND GENDER IN HIGHER EDUCATION

September 20–22, 1989

Sheraton Society Hill • Philadelphia, Pa.

The American educational system has long espoused the idea that students should emerge from their undergraduate careers as well-rounded individuals. Perhaps the time is ripe to re-examine what constitutes a well-rounded education, which values are being inculcated, and what and who are being excluded—for what reasons and to what ends. Much has been written recently on the theory of race, ethnicity and gender, but putting it into practice is the difficulty. What is needed is a “hands-on” approach to the possibilities and difficulties of application of such theories to teaching and the curriculum in the discipline, in order to make education meaningful, relevant and accessible to all.

This conference sees diversity among the students of our colleges and universities as the bedrock of American culture. The development of a critical consciousness which sustains and guides students through the socio-political contexts in which they live is the true mission of a college curriculum. The disciplines are the vehicles through which the theoretical underpinnings of a democratic society can be put into practice. Freedom from oppressive thought and ideology, and a mind open to the unique histories, contributions and circumstances of those who differ in ethnicity, gender and class are the results of an effective higher education.

“Opening the American Mind” offers scholars and teachers an opportunity to present historical and theoretical views, as well as innovative approaches to instruction. Above all, the conference, as a forum for convergent and divergent points of view, offers an opportunity to work out practical methods and applications for the future.

FANTASY LITERATURE for CHILDREN and YOUNG ADULTS

Third Edition

An Annotated Bibliography

Ruth Nadelman Lynn

This completely updated and expanded guide draws on 24 distinguished review sources to recommend 3,300 fantasy works—including 1,600 new to this edition—for children and young adults in grades 3 through 12.

Each title has been favorably reviewed and recommended by at least two standard review sources and each is labeled as outstanding or recommended. Thorough annotations also note major awards won, reading level, full bibliographic information, and more!

Booklist called the 2nd edition “a valuable reference tool for librarians, teachers, and students of children’s literature... a guide to build collections, to locate specific titles or kinds of fantasy, and to stimulating research.”

With its newly added Subject Index and Research Guide which includes critical and biographical information on some 600 children’s and young adult fantasy authors, the new, comprehensive 3rd edition will be invaluable for maintaining a strong fantasy section and for working with this popular genre.

POINT OF NO RETURN

By Martha Gellhorn. With a new Afterword by the author. Originally published in 1948 as The Wine of Astonishment, this brilliant story of men and women and their war-torn emotions is recognized as the first American war novel written by a woman.

© PLUME 0-452-26223-2 $8.95

EX-WIFE

By Ursula Parrott. Introduction by Francine Prose. When it was first published in 1929, EX-WIFE was deemed so scandalous that Parrott kept her identity secret. This entertaining and funny novel shows contemporary readers the sexual mores and double standards for women in the 1920's.

© PLUME 0-452-26224-0 $7.95

ANGEL ISLAND

By Inez Haynes Gillmore. Introduction by Ursula K. LeGuin. In this undiscovered 1914 classic, five shipwrecked men try to tame five flying women and clip their wings. But before long these magical bird-creatures create a new life and a greater wonder comes when a male child is born with wings of his own.

PINK AND WHITE TYRANNY

A Society Novel

By Harriet Beecher Stowe. Introduction by Judith Martin. Written in 1871, this astute novel of manners is a penetrating look at the institution of marriage. Stowe transcends the obvious to reveal how Lillie Ellis, a professional belle and undeniable manipulator, is a victim of her own femininity.

© PLUME 0-452-26177-5 $7.95

THE PRODIGAL WOMEN

By Nancy Hale. Introduction by Mary Lee Settle. The New Yorker hailed this novel as one "full of stature, skillfully projected...beautifully written." Four decades later Hale's story of Leda March, a Boston Brahmin who had everything, and Betsy and Maizie Jekyll, two beautiful and cunning Southern belles, remains fresh and vibrant for readers today.

Ghosts, Demons, and Henry James

The Turn of the Screw at the Turn of the Century

Peter G. Beidler. Placing Henry James's most famous story within the tradition of the "factual" ghost narrative, Beidler argues convincingly that James intended to write a story of supernatural, rather than merely psychological, terror. 0684-0 160 pages $25.00

Shakespeare, Fletcher, and The Two Noble Kinsmen

Essays Edited by Charles H. Frey. Finally recognized as part of Shakespeare's canon, The Two Noble Kinsmen is the often-neglected collaboration of the Bard and John Fletcher. This collection of essays, exploring problems of coauthorship, interpretation, and history of performance, opens the way for in-depth study of this little-known masterpiece. 0705-7 232 pages $24.00

Jewish Issues in Argentine Literature From Gerchunoff to Szichman

Naomi Lindstrom. Treating one of the least explored but most intellectually challenging aspects of Argentine literature, Naomi Lindstrom examines the works of Jewish authors in Argentina from 1910 to the present. In doing so, she offers both a historical account of Jewish contributions to Argentine literature and detailed analyses of selected works by eight Jewish-Argentine writers. 0708-1 208 pages $24.00

Gracious Laughter The Meditative Wit of Edward Taylor

John Gatta. This illuminating study shows how Edward Taylor's exploitation of wit, play, and the comic spirit flowed from his peculiar grasp of Puritan and Christian poetics. By exploring the significance of this wit in its diverse forms, Gatta offers a fresh perspective on those traits of mind and composition that have established Edward Taylor as the foremost poet of early America. 0704-9 240 pages $26.00

Architects of the Abyss The Indeterminate Fictions of Poe, Hawthorne, and Melville

Dennis Pahl. "Working within a post-structuralist theoretical frame, Mr. Pahl, in an exemplary way, puts theory into practice. His work, because of its cogency and clarity, will make available to many practitioners a body of philosophical understanding that otherwise might be difficult to apply to the reading of specific books."—Kenneth Dauber, State University of New York at Buffalo. 0707-3 160 pages $26.00

The English Coalition Conference

DEMOCRACY THROUGH LANGUAGE

edited by Richard Lloyd-Jones
and Andrea A. Lunsford

This volume represents the official reports of elementary, secondary, and college teachers of English who gathered in 1987 to examine common challenges and issues of concern and to chart directions for the study of English into the twenty-first century. It presents the major conclusions reached by conference participants, as well as background information, position papers, some sketches designed to illustrate the problems and opportunities facing English studies, and a number of appendixes. The volume could be profitably read not only by professionals in the field of English but by educational administrators and parents as well.

Language, Gender, and Professional Writing will change the way you choose your words. Delving into the roots and consequences of linguistic sexism, the book persuasively argues the case for eliminating biased usage and shows authors how to express their thoughts fairly and accurately without sacrificing clarity and grace. Designed for scholars, teachers, students, professionals, and general readers, Language, Gender, and Professional Writing unites research, theoretical approaches, and actual examples to provide the best-grounded and most comprehensive guidelines available for nonsexist writing. A thorough subject index provides problem-solving help, and four substantial bibliographies reflect the controversies surrounding sexist language and point to suggestions for dealing with it.

MAKE YOUR CHOICE... AND BE CRITICAL!

Gale invites you to compare our new Short Story Criticism series with other similar reference tools—and be tough.

SSC can stand the scrutiny because it's the only source that provides in-depth critical analysis of major works of short fiction—particularly those most often studied in high school and college literature classes. Authors to be discussed in forthcoming semi-annual volumes include Isaac Bashevis Singer, Alice Munro, Arthur C. Clarke, and James Joyce.

Unlike its competitors, SSC strives to include all short stories by each of the selected authors. Other reference sources typically discuss one to three stories and briefly mention one to five additional titles.

And while other critical sources dealing with short fiction typically contract an editor to write a single critical essay per author, SSC presents a full range of viewpoints by the most distinguished critics from the author's time to the present. Portraits of each author, descriptive annotations, and complete bibliographical information are also included. About 470 pp. per volume. $75.00. (Volumes 1 and 2 in print; Volume 3 ready October, 1989)

Is Your Library One of the 3,500 That Subscribe to PMLA?

SIX REASONS TO MAKE SURE

PMLA

IS ON YOUR LIBRARY'S SHELVES

Large Readership

Over 27,500 scholars, teachers, and readers and 3,500 libraries receive PMLA six times a year. Published by the Modern Language Association since 1884, it is the scholarly journal with the largest circulation in the humanities—and the circulation has increased over ten percent during the last two years.

The Best Essays on Language and Literature

PMLA features notable articles in language and literature study. Recent and forthcoming issues include essays on “male malady” in the French Romantic novel, Yeats’s tragic sublime, reading recipes as gendered discourse, the politics of Johnson’s dictionary, Foucault’s Oriental subtext, art and power in Pedro Calderón de la Barca’s plays, Ibsen’s feminism, the Elephant Man, and Matthew Arnold and modern conceptions of apocalypse.

A Complete Annual Directory for Language and Literature Scholars

The September issue of PMLA provides up-to-date directories of members of the Modern Language Association, departmental administrators at colleges and universities in the United States and Canada, ethnic studies programs, language programs, women’s studies programs, organizations of independent scholars, and humanities research centers. A Directory of Useful Addresses includes over six hundred publishers and academic organizations.

New Feature

Works by MLA Honorary Members and Fellows

Two years ago, PMLA began publishing pieces by the association’s honorary members and fellows, distinguished men and women of letters and distinguished foreign scholars. The series has included a previously unpublished short story by Carlos Fuentes, an essay on Marguerite Duras by French critic Julia Kristeva, an article by Umberto Eco, the Nobel Prize acceptance speech by Wole Soyinka, and an interview with Gabriel García Márquez.

New Feature

Criticism in Translation

This year, PMLA began to publish translations of seminal scholarship until now unavailable in English. The first in the series was an essay by Gérard Genette that appeared in the March 1989 issue.

New Feature

Special Topics

The January 1990 PMLA will inaugurate a new feature: articles grouped around a subject or theme. The premier issue will cover Afro-American literature and will feature essays on Martin Luther King, Jr., the novelization of voice in Afro-American narrative, Harlem Renaissance writers, Afro-American literary history, and Tolson’s Harlem Gallery. Future special topics include canons, the politics of critical language, the cinema, theory of literary history, and performance.

PMLA, which contains more than 1,200 pages each year, is available from all major subscription services at an annual institutional rate of $88. If you’d like more information or a subscription, write Customer Services, Modern Language Association, 10 Astor Place, New York, NY 10003-6981.

LITERARY CLASSICS FOR MODERN TIMES

Since 1913, Houghton Mifflin has brought to life the characters, the stories, and the images of a truly classic American writer—Willa Cather. Now, on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the original publication date, we are proud to introduce stunning new paperback editions of three of Cather's best known and widely respected novels. Both long-time Cather devotees and first-time students of American Literature will appreciate these contemporary editions of the author's timeless depictions of life on the western prairie.

My Ántonia, widely recognized as Willa Cather's finest book, portrays the strength and fortitude of a pioneer woman in the frontier farmlands of Nebraska. In the words of H.L. Mencken, "No romantic novel ever written in America, by man or woman, is one half so beautiful as My Ántonia." $5.95 Paper

In O Pioneers! Cather introduces the memorable Alexandra Bergson, the daughter of Swedish immigrant farmers. Through her struggles with the hardships and suffering of prairie life, Alexandra becomes the model of a remarkable, spirited heroine. $5.95 Paper

Willa Cather called The Song of the Lark her favorite novel. This story of a young woman's awakening as an artist and her struggle to escape the constraints of a small town in Colorado rounds out the author's response to the ever-present question of home and her own identity as a writer. $8.95 Paper

Since 1981, the MLA International Bibliography has indexed approximately 250,000 articles and books on literature and language. Now the H. W. Wilson Company is offering all seven years' worth of data on a single compact disc.

The CD-ROM version of the Bibliography provides the same extensive cross-referencing available in the printed subject index but eliminates the hours necessary to thumb through the fourteen books published since 1981. The disc version offers many additional timesaving devices; for example, a user who wishes to find materials on the theme of racism in Eudora Welty's fiction would simply enter "Welty, Eudora" and "racism."

For a nominal telecommunications charge, WILSONDISC™ users also enjoy unlimited searching of the Bibliography on WILSONLINE®, which is updated monthly from November to June, so that information added to the file between quarterly updates of WILSONDISC is easily and inexpensively available. With one keystroke, users switch from searching the CD to searching online.

Understanding Contemporary American Literature

edited by Matthew J. Bruccoli

"I am grateful to Ronald Baughman for his judicious and intelligent treatment of my work. The series in which his study appears is remarkable."—James Dickey

"These volumes are a wonderful beginning, an invitation to understanding and, beyond that, to a deeper enjoyment of the literature of our age."—George Garrett

"To be published in this series is an honor—to be understood, a miracle."—Mary Lee Settle Understanding Contemporary American Literature is a series of companions or guides that introduces important contemporary writers—identifying and explicating their material, themes, use of language, points of view, structures, symbolism, and responses to experience. Through criticism and analysis, the books provide readers with an understanding of how contemporary literature works—that is, what the author is attempting to express and the means by which it is conveyed. Written for students and good nonacademic readers alike, these books are excellent supplemental reading that will prepare readers for more rewarding literary experiences.

Making a Spectacle

Feminist Essays on Contemporary Women's Theatre

The first wide-ranging collection of scholarly articles to apply feminist perspectives to the work of women writers for the stage. The book breaks new ground in the field of feminist criticism by confronting the absence or minimalization of women theatre artists, discussing the strategies of women writers who are appropriating the stage to assert their own images, analyzing the politics of theatrical reception and production, and deconstructing the ideology of dramatic representations.

MORE THAN COOL REASON

A Field Guide to Poetic Metaphor

George Lakoff and Mark Turner

"The authors restore metaphor to our lives by showing us that it's never gone away. We've merely been taught to talk as if it had: as though weather maps were more 'real' than the breath of autumn; as though, for that matter, Reason was really 'cool.' MODERNISM AND THE HARLEM RENAISSANCE

Houston A. Baker, Jr.

"Baker perceives the Harlem Renaissance as a crucial moment in a movement, predating the 1920s, when Afro-Americans embraced the task of self-determination and in so doing gave forth a distinctive form of expression that still echoes in a broad spectrum of 20th-century Afro-American arts. . . . May well become Afro-America's 'studying manual'."—Tonya Bolden Davis, New York Times Book Review

REALISM, WRITING, DISFIGURATION

On Thomas Eakins and Stephen Crane

Michael Fried

In parallel studies of Eakins's paintings and Crane's novels and stories, Fried discovers a concern with the materiality of writing, a discovery that transforms our understanding of their respective achievements.

"Current criticism of the best stamp: accessible to any thoughtful reader, yet densely and brilliantly reasoned."—Harry Goldar, New York Times Book Review

Nabokov

The Mystery of Literary Structures

By LEONA TOKER. Vladimir Nabokov described the college literature course he used to teach as "a kind of detective investigation of the mystery of literary structures." Leona Toker here pursues a similar investigation of the enigmatic structures of Nabokov's own fiction. $27.50

The Narrative of Liberation

Perspectives on Afro-Caribbean Literature, Popular Culture, and Politics

By PATRICK TAYLOR. "Taylor's book will become a landmark in Caribbean and Third World literary/cultural studies. His work on Fanon clearly constitutes the best intellectual genealogy of Fanon's thought." —Abdul R. JanMohamed, University of California, Berkeley. $29.95

Realism and Revolution

Balzac, Stendhal, Zola, and the Performances of History

By SANDY PETREY. Petrey explores the emergence of nineteenth-century French realism in the light of the concept of speech acts as defined by J. L. Austin and as exemplified by the history of the French Revolution. $24.95

Manhood and the American Renaissance

By DAVID LEVERENZ. Leverenz draws on feminist theory and social history to show how images of manhood influenced such nineteenth-century writers as Melville, Thoreau, and Whitman. "Certain to be acclaimed as a major original interpretation of antebellum literary culture." —Lawrence Buell, Oberlin College. $32.50

Symphonia

A Critical Edition of the Symphony of the Harmony of Celestial Revelations

By ST. HILDEGARD OF BINGEN. Edited and Translated by Barbara Newman. With an essay on the music by Marianne Richert Pfau. Newman here provides a new edition of the original Latin texts and both literal prose translations and sensitive verse translations of the songs in this recently rediscovered liturgical cycle. $9.95 paper, $39.95 cloth

Unfolded Tales

Essays on Renaissance Romance

Edited by GEORGE M. LOGAN and GORDON TESKEY. This collection of twelve original essays on Renaissance romance addresses a seldom-discussed problem in literary history: the remarkable authority of an essentially popular mode of expression—romance—at a time when elite, classical values were being affirmed in theoretical writings. $37.50

Franz Kafka

The Necessity of Form

By STANLEY CORNGOLD. "[Corngold's book] is informed by a powerful, lucid philosophy for the interpretation of literature." —Geoffrey Waite, Cornell University. Corngold attributes the basic themes and strategies of Kafka's fiction to a tension between his concern for writing and his growing sense of its arbitrary nature. $29.95

Kafka's Rhetoric

The Passion of Reading

By CLAYTON KOELB. In the first book to study Franz Kafka from the perspective of modern rhetorical theory, Koelb explores such questions as how Kafka understood the reading process and how his highly distinctive style relates to what Koelb describes as the "passion of reading." $28.95

A Concordance to the Complete Poems of E. E. Cummings

Edited by KATE McBRIDE. Based on E. E. Cummings, Complete Poems: 1913–1962, published by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich in 1968, this concordance indexes Cummings's "words" in even the most typographically eccentric contexts. The Cornell Concordances. $55.00
