*The roots of modern consumer society
can be found in the extraordinary demand for art in Renaissance Italy.*

Wealth and the Demand for Art in Italy, 1300–1600

Richard A. Goldthwaite

Why did Italy produce so much art in the Renaissance? In this groundbreaking book, historian Richard Goldthwaite finds new answers to this question by focusing on the demand for art as an economic phenomenon. Offering a broad interpretation of the forces behind the economic and cultural event known as the Renaissance, Goldthwaite shows how the extraordinary increase in artistic production arose out of circumstances unique to Italy.

Wealth and the Demand for Art in Italy, 1300–1600 represents a new departure from previous studies, both in its focus on demand and in its emphasis on the history of the material culture of the West. By demonstrating that the roots of modern consumer society can be found in Renaissance Italy, Goldthwaite offers a significant contribution to the growing body of literature on the history of modern consumerism—a movement which he regards as a positive force for the formation of new attitudes about things that is a defining characteristic of modern culture. $29.95 hardcover

ALBRECHT ALTDORFER AND THE ORIGINS OF LANDSCAPE

Christopher S. Wood

In the early sixteenth century, Albrecht Altdorfer promoted landscape from its traditionally supplementary role to the center of the picture field. This beautifully illustrated book shows how Altdorfer transformed what had been the mere setting for sacred and historical figures into a principal venue for stylish draftsmanship and idiosyncratic painterly effects.

LIKENESS AND PRESENCE

A History of the Image before the Era of Art
Hans Belting

Translated by Edmund Jephcott

One of the world's leading scholars of medieval art traces the long history of the image and its changing role in European culture. Exploring the place of the image from late antiquity to the Reformation and Renaissance, Belting details its transformation from an object of veneration to an aesthetic object.

"A book of astonishing empirical richness, in which exegesis never obscures vision, but rather invokes the image's own uncanny and primarily equivocal power."—Joseph Leo Koerner, Harvard University

THE ART OF RENAISSANCE VENICE

Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting, 1460-1590

Norbert Huse and Wolfgang Wolters

Translated by Edmund Jephcott

In this lavishly illustrated, synthesizing study, Huse and Wolters offer an important counterbalance to art historical literature by establishing architecture—not painting—as the key Venetian Renaissance art.

"The historical aspect of this book is splendid, but where it excels is in its fearless and thought-provoking critical judgements. . . . It will lead both beginners and experts to new joys."

LARS ENGLE

SHAKESPEAREAN PRAGMATISM

Market of His Time
Lars Engle

Viewing Shakespeare for the first time in the context of contemporary pragmatism, Engle offers a sweeping new account of his enterprise as a theatrical economy in which notions of reality are evaluated, negotiated, and accepted or rejected.

“Engle gives us an invaluable insight into what he calls ‘the contingency of evaluation’ in Shakespeare—a contingency of price, worth, and value—together with an account of how that evaluation serves as a continual prod to the dramatist’s creativity.”—David Bevington, University of Chicago

SHAKESPEARE THE ACTOR AND THE PURPOSES OF PLAYING

Meredith Anne Skura

Skura asks what it meant to be an actor in Shakespeare’s England and shows why a knowledge of actual theatrical practices is essential for understanding both Shakespeare’s plays and the theatricality of everyday life in early modern England. Looking at the plays in the context of both public and private worlds outside the theater, Skura rereads the canon to identify new configurations in the plays and new ways of understanding theatrical self-consciousness in Renaissance England.

CULTURAL AESTHETICS

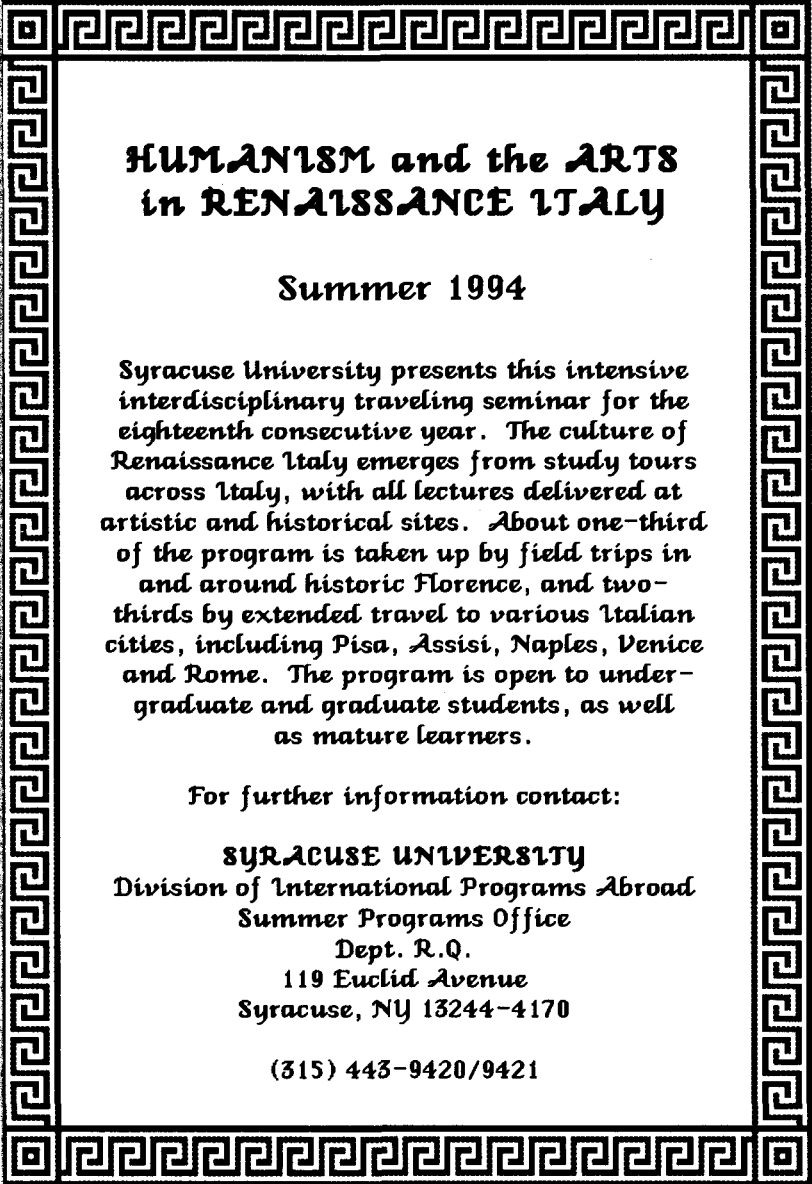

Renaissance Literature and the Practice of Social Ornament
Patricia Fumerton

This critique of renaissance subjectivity explores the simultaneous formation and fragmentation of aristocratic “selfhood” in the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries.

“One of the year’s best books, a challenging, entertaining irreverent dare to all of us to throw off, or at least to interrogate, what have become a stale set of preoccupations in the analysis of Renaissance literature and culture.”

HUMANISM and the ARTS in RENAISSANCE ITALY

Summer 1994

Syracuse University presents this intensive interdisciplinary traveling seminar for the eighteenth consecutive year. The culture of Renaissance Italy emerges from study tours across Italy, with all lectures delivered at artistic and historical sites. About one-third of the program is taken up by field trips in and around historic Florence, and two-thirds by extended travel to various Italian cities, including Pisa, Assisi, Naples, Venice and Rome. The program is open to undergraduate and graduate students, as well as mature learners.

VERMEER

Faith in Painting
DANIEL ARASSE

Translated by Terry Grabar

Through a historical analysis of Vermeer's method of production and a close reading of his art, Daniel Arasse explores the originality of this artist in the context of seventeenth-century Dutch painting.

"Arasse's work is art criticism at its best: the operations of an articulate intelligence and a keenly probing eye, demonstrating a love of painting and a respect for history. Reading this book, one feels the heightened experience of following a natural teacher—a guide who wants to share his enthusiasm, his sense of adventure, and the discoveries made in exploring a picture."

BETWEEN FRIENDS

Discourses of Power and Desire in the Machiavelli-
Vettori Letters of 1513-1515

JOHN M. NAJEMY

Between Friends offers the first extended close reading of the most famous epistolary dialogue of the Renaissance, the letters exchanged from 1513 to 1515 by Niccolò Machiavelli and Francesco Vettori. John Najemy reveals the literary richness and theoretical tensions of the correspondence, the crucial importance of the dialogue with Vettori in Machiavelli's emergence as a writer and political theorist, and the close but complex relationship between the letters and Machiavelli's major works on politics.

GIORGIO VASARI

Architect and Courtier

LEON SATKOWSKI

With photographs by Ralph Lieberman

Well-known for his paintings and his book The Lives of the Artists, Giorgio Vasari also served as court architect to Grand Duke Cosimo I de' Medici, contributing such politically symbolic buildings as the Uffizi in Florence. Leon Satkowski presents the first book in any language to survey the architecture of Vasari.

By focusing on the architect's service to his distinguished patrons and his collaboration with other architects, Satkowski reveals how Vasari combined imaginative design, political meaning, and a clear sense of history.

DOCTOR ILLUMINATUS

A Ramon Llull Reader

EDITED AND TRANSLATED BY ANTHONY BONNER

For this new anthology, Anthony Bonner has chosen central texts from his acclaimed two-volume compilation Selected Works of Ramon Llull. These four works serve as an introduction to the life and writings of the Catalan philosopher, mystic, and theologian who lived from 1232 to 1316. The editor has included three prefaces on Llull's life, thought, and reputation, and the book contains a new translation of Llull's The Book of the Lover and the Beloved by Eve Bonner.

Emory University announces a six-week summer institute designed to facilitate the teaching of Virgil's Aeneid in a wide variety of humanities courses. Participants will combine intensive reading of the Aeneid with study of the poem's place in its own time and of its changing status in the Western literary canon. We will consider ancient, medieval, Renaissance, and modern reception of Virgil by poets and scholars, and we will assess the contribution of contemporary critical methodologies to long-standing interpretive controversies in the Aeneid.

Knowledge of Latin is not required.

Applications are invited from full-time humanities faculty in American colleges and universities. 25 participants will receive room, board, travel, and $1500 stipend.

Deadline for applications: March 1, 1994.

THE FIRST JESUITS

JOHN W. O'MALLEY, S.J.

"Neither fazed nor overwhelmed, Father O'Malley, a Jesuit who teaches church history at the Weston School of Theology in Massachusetts, never loses sight of the forest among the myriad trees. His aim in [this book] is to discover what lies behind such apparently banal phrases as Ignatius' 'our way of proceeding'... Father O'Malley's work covers the first quarter-century of the Jesuits, from 1540 to 1565... Far from being simply a chronicle, it is an account of how the Jesuits, led by the internal dynamism of the Holy Spirit, responded to unpredictable events and new needs. The 34th General Congregation... can have no better guide than this book as it strives to uncover what Ignatius' 'charisma' means for today."

NOTORIOUS IDENTITY

Materializing the Subject in Shakespeare

LINDA CHARNES

"This is a dazzling and challenging book. With elegance and verve Linda Charnes poses the question of names and subjectivities and shifts in the process our framework for making sense of Shakespeare."

—Catherine Belsey

"Notorious Identity introduces an important new voice in the fields of Shakespeare scholarship, literary theory, and cultural studies. [Charnes] discusses challenging theoretical material, in particular, with clarity and elegance. She herself takes an eclectic approach that represents the most promising of directions for critical practice. The approach is admirably coherent in its application to three different plays by Shakespeare."
