SHANE DOYLE

There were errors in Figures 3, 4 and 6 in the paper by S. Doyle (2008) for which the author and editors apologize. During the transfer of the graphs between different programs, the software automatically reconfigured the y axes so that the totals appeared in numerical rather than percentage format. This resulted in the name category totals being represented as, for example, 0.1, 0.2, 0.3 rather than 10%, 20%, 30%, etc. The correct version of Figures 3, 4 and 6 are given below.

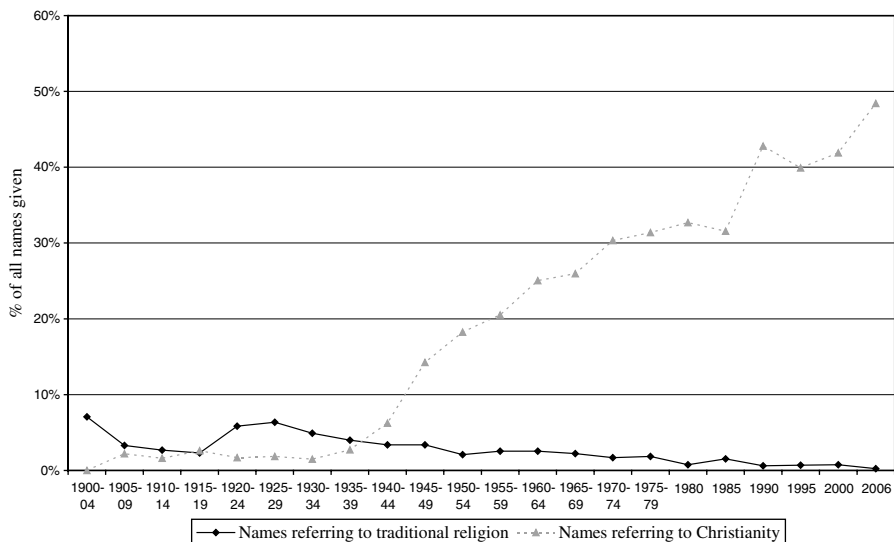

Fig. 3. The changing frequency of religious names.

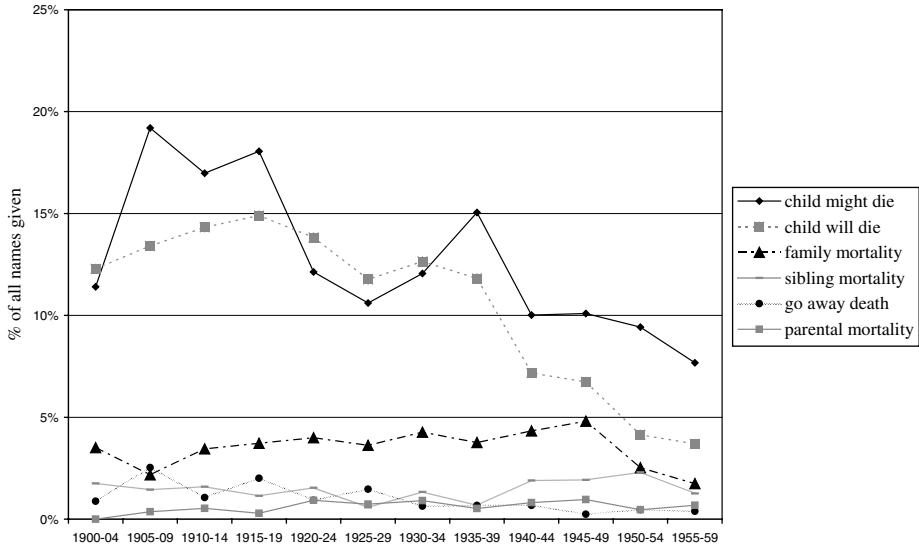

Fig. 4. The frequency of mortality-related names in colonial Bunyoro.

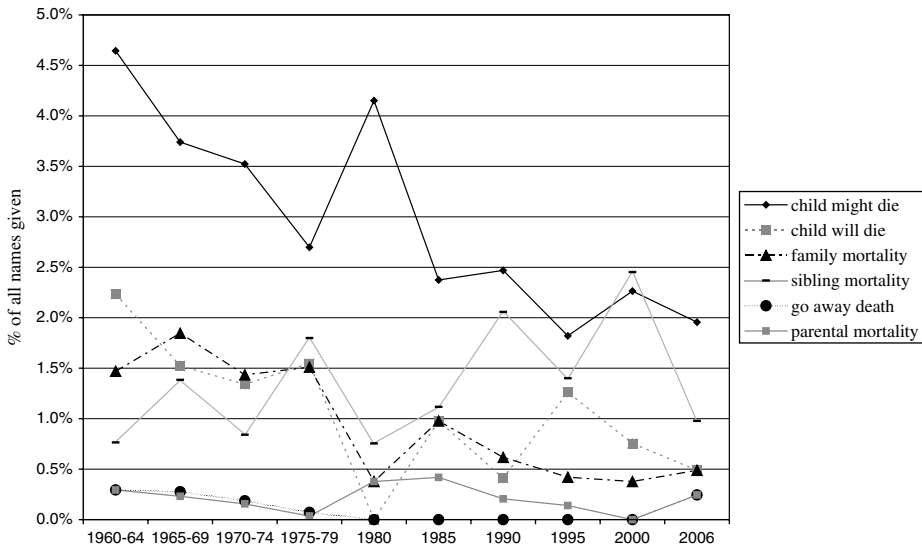

Fig. 6. The frequency of mortality-related names in postcolonial Bunyoro.
