CONFIDENTIAL
U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT CENTRAL FILES

China, Indochina, Japan

The definitive source of American diplomatic reporting, the State Department's Central Files on Asia open broad, new avenues of research in political, social, and economic history. The detail and scope of these new collections is unequalled, illuminating the history of modern Asia in extensive detail. No other research collection matches the historical range, the in-depth analysis, the exhaustive treatment of these files. It is this kind of documentation that makes our new collection an essential addition to any reference collection.

At Play with Krishna

Pilgrimage Dramas from Brindavan

John Stratton Hawley

In association with Shrivatsa Goswami

"...beginning with the excitement of the birth of the divine child, through his childhood, full of mischievous pranks, through the great circle dance when those who love Krishna share their joy by dancing with him in the moonlight, through his imminent departure from Mathura, the reader, just as the spectator in performance, is made to feel that he has allowed himself to be temporarily swept into Brindavan's magic circle."

The Wondrous Crest-Jewel in Performance

Text and Translation of the Ascaryacudamani of Saktibhadra

Translated by V. RAGHAVAN, D. LEELA A. NAMBUDIRIPAD, and BETTY TRUE JONES. Here, for the first time, is the Sanskrit text and English translation of one of the most important plays in the still-living Sanskrit dramatic tradition. The volume also includes a medieval production manual, a comprehensive introduction, and a glossary of technical terms. 1985 300 pp. $16.95

Perception and Inference

An Essay on the Problems of Knowledge in Classical Indian Philosophy

BIMAL KRISHNA MATILAL, All Souls College, Oxford. This book defends Naive, or Direct, Realism—a form of realism that is in many ways similar to the position upheld by the Nyāya school in classical India. Matila reconstructs Nyāya arguments to meet objections from both the Buddhists and the sense-data representationists. 1985 350 pp. $34.50

The Framework of the Indian Economics

An Introduction to Economics

JOHN R. HICKS, formerly of University of Oxford, M. MUKHERJEE, Indian Statistical Institute, Calcutta, and K. GHOSH, Indian Institute of Management, Calcutta. Drawing on the most up-to-date research and statistics, this adaptation of the fourth edition of The Social Framework now incorporates material on the structural features of Indian and other developing economies. The authors also examine major changes in the Indian economy in recent decades. 1985 350 pp.; illus. paper $9.95

Javanese Peasants and the Colonial Sugar Industry

Impact and Change in an East Java Residency, 1830-1940

ROBERT EDWARD ELSON, Griffith University, Queensland, Australia. THE INNER CONFLICT OF TRADITION

Essays in Indian Ritual, Kingship, and Society
J. C. Heesterman

Heesterman, a distinguished sociologist and Indologist, explores on historical, philosophical, and anthropological levels the Indian conflict between the Hindu ideal of world-renunciation and the realities of social existence. In so doing, he gently critiques such Indic scholars as Louis Dumont, Louis Renou, and Madeleine Biardeau.

TALES OF SEX AND VIOLENCE

Folklore, Sacrifice, and Danger in the Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa
Wendy Doniger O'Flaherty

Long reviled by Sanskrit scholars as nonsensical, dream-like digressions from Vedic theology, the tales of sex, death, and family rivalry that comprise the Brāhmaṇas are reevaluated here by a witty and brilliant Indologist. O'Flaherty provides original translations of twenty-seven tales, illuminating them with insights from folklore and Freudian psychoanalysis.
