

Philosophy and the Arts is Volume 6 of the Royal Institute of Philosophy's annual lectures. Volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, The Human Agent, Talk of God, Knowledge and Necessity, The Proper Study and Reason and Reality were published by Macmillan in 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971 and 1972 respectively. Volume 7 will contain lectures on Wittgenstein.

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF PHILOSOPHY

The Institute welcomes as members all those who are interested in philosophical problems, irrespective of their professional qualifications. Particulars may be obtained from the Secretary, Royal Institute of Philosophy, 14 Gordon Square, London, W.C.1.

Jacket design: Grünewald, The Buffeting or The Mocking of Christ (Alte Pinakothek, Munich)

Printed in Great Britain

In the same series

The Human Agent

'There are papers on the perennial problems of freedom and determinism, on the applicability of the notion of causation to human action, on the mind—body problem and on a number of other matters more loosely connected with the central theme. One who wished to know of the sort of thing discussed by contemporary British philosophers under these heads could not do better than to turn to this book for information.' — The Times Literary Supplement

Talk of God

'The book is ideal seminar-material, an essential tool for any religious course, and a beneficial one for general philosophy courses . . . a volume which is calculated to stimulate thinking in many areas of philosophy.' -- Keith Ward, Philosophical Books

Knowledge and Necessity

'The issues raised by the contributors to this excellent collection show at least that problems in the theory of knowledge cannot easily be prised apart from those in other philosophical precincts. The standard is uniformly high and some of the papers are refreshingly original in breaking new ground. In a convincing foreword Professor Vesey manages to thread together the somewhat heterogeneous selection of topics.' — R.W.Newell, Philosophical Quarterly

The Proper Study

'This collection is on topical matters and is full of variety and interest. It refutes the claim, often made, that philosophers never apply themselves to what concerns society. It should be required reading for every sociology student; philosophers will read it anyway.' — British Book News

Reason and Reality

'Some of the papers in this volume seem to me of outstanding interest, and none of them insignificant. . . . The collection as a whole evinces a somewhat different attitude to the philosophers of the past, or rather a different expectation of what is to be learnt from them, than used until very recently to be fashionable. One who was in favour of the change might put it that there is now a greater inclination to think about the traditional problems of metaphysics and the theory of knowledge, rather than to think about how not to think about them.' — Hugo Meynell, Mind