Studies in Family
Kinship and Demography

Published by the National Council on Family Relations

Editor: Tamara K. Hareven

Associate Editor: Robert Wheaton

THE JOURNAL OF FAMILY HISTORY is an interdisciplinary scholarly undertaking, which publishes relevant research in history, demography, anthropology, and sociology—in the liberal arts as well as in the social sciences. Articles are published which

- advance the theory and methodologies used in the field
- present the results of recent research work in hitherto neglected areas
- provide up-to-date résumés of existing scholarship
- review major scholarly works in Family History

Its first eleven issues included special issues on Sexuality and the Family in France; Papers from the Collum Shelby Davis Center at Princeton University; and The Family in Latin America. In addition to articles on the United States and Western Europe, studies have appeared on Japan, Kenya, Latvia, and Jamaica.

FORTHCOMING:

The June, 1979 issue will publish historical essays on Women, Work, and the Family which were commissioned for a conference sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation, with contributions by Ankarloo, Bennett and Elder, Dubnoff, Hareven, Oppenheimer, Rainwater, and Tilly. In December, 1979 a second issue of papers edited by Lawrence Stone from the Collum Shelby Davis Center will appear. A special issue focusing on family history in Central and Eastern Europe, edited by Michael Mitterauer of the University of Vienna, is now in preparation. General issues in the coming year will include, among others, articles on the application of network theory to kinship relations (Richard Smith), on aging (Stearns, and Chaudacoff & Hareven), on household structure in medieval Macedonia (Hammel), and on the nature of charivari in Northern Italy (Klapisch).

HISTORICAL METHODS NEWSLETTER has changed.

It has a new name and a new home. Now known as HISTORICAL METHODS, the journal is part of the family of educational journals published by Heldref Publications in Washington, D. C.

But, the journal has not changed where it counts. HISTORICAL METHODS continues as a leading disseminator of information about interdisciplinary and quantitative research.

In each issue you will find:

- descriptions of new research approaches
- instructive uses of advanced statistical techniques
- interdisciplinary discussions of perspectives on historical research problems
- computer applications in history
- new research projects being launched
- review essays designed to keep you informed on what is being published in wide variety of fields
- news and announcements of conferences
- new publications
- newly available source material

A lot has happened in the last ten years and Historical Methods Newsletter was the best place to keep track of it. Now it is HISTORICAL METHODS.
