

About the Authors . . .

THOMAS G. BASTEDO is a Lecturer in Political Science at Scarborough College, University of Toronto. His main interest is in Indian Law. He is currently completing his LL.B. at Osgood Hall Law School of York University in Toronto and his Ph.D. in political science at Duke University.

PHILIP B. CALKINS is an Assistant Professor in the Department of History at the University of Chicago, specializing in the history of India during the Sultanate and Mughal periods. His current research is on the Mughal administration in Bengal during the first half of the 18th century. His general area of research interest is the political, economic, and social relationships between local and regional ruling groups and the Mughal imperial government.

JEROME A. COHEN is Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, specializing in Chinese Law. He is a member of the American Society of International Law and the Executive Committee of Harvard's East Asian Research Center. He is chairman of the Subcommittee on Chinese Law of the Joint Committee on Contemporary China of the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Sciences Research Council. His most recent publication is The Criminal Process in the People's Republic of China, 1949-1963: An Introduction.

GEORGE H. GADBOIS, JR. is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. His major interest lies in comparative politics of South Asia and Asian political thought. He has been Associate Director, Institute of Advanced Projects, East-West Center, and has written "Selection, Background Characteristics, and Voting Behavior of Indian Supreme Court Judges, 1950-1959" (now in press).

MARC GALANTER is an Associate Professor in the Social Sciences in the College of the University of Chicago. A lawyer by training, he is the author of several studies of Indian law. He is interested in the development of law in South Asia and its impact upon traditional social organization. He is currently working on a study of the relation of law to caste and religion in modern India.

DAN FENNO HENDERSON is Visiting Professor of Law, Harvard Law School and Professor of Law and Director of the Asian Law Program in the School of Law, University of Washington. He is chairman of the Far Eastern Law Committee, American Bar Association and Editor of Law in Japan: An Annual. He is the author of Conciliation and Japanese Law—Tokugawa and Modern and of numerous articles on Japanese Law.

ROBERT L. KIDDER is a Ph.D. candidate in the Program of Law and Social Science at Northwestern University. From 1964-1966 he held a Shansi Teaching Fellowship from Oberlin College to teach English in South India. His interests lie in law and social science particularly in India. He is currently a member of the editorial board of the Law & Society Review.

G. OLIVER KOPPELL is a graduate of Harvard Law School and presently associated with the firm of Cravath, Swaine & Moore in New York City. He has spent a year at the Indian Law Institute, New Delhi as an Afro-Asian Fellow from Syracuse University (Maxwell School). He has published in the Journal of the Indian Law Institute: "Legal Aid in India" and "The Emergency, the Courts and Indian Democracy."

HAROLD L. LEVY is currently on the faculty of the University of Maryland where he is teaching comparative politics and American government. His training has been in education, law, and political science and his major interests include comparative politics, particularly in South Asia, constitutional law, and political theory.

HERBERT CHRISTIAN L. MERILLAT received a B.A. in Jurisprudence and Bachelor of Civil Law at Oxford University. He has served as an attorney in the Treasury Department, an official of foreign aid agencies, and on the staff of the Ford Foundation, including two years in India as a consultant on legal studies. He has also been Executive Director of the American Society of International Law and a visiting Professor of Law at the University of Washington. Presently, with the assistance of a Ford Foundation study award, he is completing a book on the constitutional problems involved in land reform programs in India.

CHARLES MORRISON is Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Rochester. He has visited India as a Ford Foundation Foreign Area Fellow and as an American Institute of Indian Studies Faculty Research Fellow. He is currently engaged in research on urban social life in Ambala City, Haryana.

LUDO ROCHER is Professor of Sanskrit and Chairman of the Department of Oriental Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of numerous publications including Vācaspatimīśra's Vyavahāracintāmani, A Digest on Legal Procedure; The Theory of Proof in Ancient Hindu Law; and Introduction Bibliographique au Droit Hindou. His main interest is classical Hindu law, although he has written many short articles on other aspects of Indian civilization.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

PETER N. ROWE is Associate Professor and Chairman of the Department of Government, Smith College. His major interest is American foreign policy and comparative political development with specialization in South Asia. He has recently published "Secular Politics and Traditional Society: Adaptations in Western Orissa."

SAMUEL W. SCHMITTHENER was born and raised in India of missionary parents and is presently himself a Lutheran missionary in Andhra, where he has served since 1952. He has conducted surveys on the religious, social, and economic conditions in that area of South India. He is currently working on his Master's thesis for the University of Pennsylvania concerning migrant tobacco workers.

FARHAT J. ZIADEH, former judge in Palestine is presently Professor of Near Eastern Studies and Chairman of the Near Eastern Program at the University of Washington. His interest lies in Islamic law and institutions. He is author of Lawyers, the Rule of Law, and Liberalism in Modern Egypt and editor and translator of Mahmassani, Philosophy of Jurisprudence in Islam.

ERRATUM . . .

In the August, 1968 issue of Law and Society Review, Brian E. Butler was inadvertently described as receiving a B.A. from Northwestern. In actuality, he received an A.B. degree from Dartmouth College.

SYMPOSIUM

“The Legal System and Civic Alienation”

A symposium will be held on the topic “The Legal System and Civic Alienation” at the Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Massachusetts on March 22, 1969. It will consist of four morning workshops, followed by a luncheon and an afternoon address. The workshop topics include:

Consumer Credit and Civic Alienation (Reform Proposal: The Negative Income Tax);

The Welfare System and Civic Alienation (Reform Proposal: The Negative Income Tax);

The Structure of Educational Decision-Making and Civic Alienation (Reform Proposal: The Bundy Report); and Urban Police and Civic Alienation (Reform Proposal: The Kerner Commission Report and The President’s Crime Commission Report on Police and Community Relations).

For further information, contact:

Professor Herbert Jacob
Law School of Harvard University
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138