

CORRIGENDUM

Transnational Knowledge Circulation and the Closing of Minds to Progressive Education Influences on Schooling in the First Decade of Independence in Ireland – Corrigendum

Thomas Walsh<sup>1</sup>  and Tom O'Donoghue<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Maynooth University, Ireland and <sup>2</sup>University of Western Australia

<https://doi.org/10.1017/heq.2024.60>, Published online by Cambridge University Press:
22 January 2025

When this article was published in History of Education Quarterly, it contained an incorrect ORCID for the author, Thomas Walsh. This has now been corrected and updated online.

The authors apologise for this error.

Reference

Walsh T, O'Donoghue T. Transnational Knowledge Circulation and the Closing of Minds to Progressive Education Influences on Schooling in the First Decade of Independence in Ireland. History of Education Quarterly. Published online 2025:1–20. doi:10.1017/heq.2024.60

---

Cite this article: Thomas Walsh and Tom O'Donoghue, “Transnational Knowledge Circulation and the Closing of Minds to Progressive Education Influences on Schooling in the First Decade of Independence in Ireland – Corrigendum,” History of Education Quarterly (2025), 0. <https://doi.org/10.1017/heq.2025.3>