LOVE IN THE TIME OF CHOLERA

Gabriel García Márquez

Translated by Edith Grossman

The lush, wondrous story of an unrequited love that survives half a century, Love in the Time of Cholera is Nobel Laureate Márquez's most lyrical and astonishing work since One Hundred Years of Solitude. With distinctive vision and mythic power, "Márquez maps out the spiritual geography of a fictional Latin America, intercutting the fates of his individual characters with the social history of a country."—Michiko Kakutani, The New York Times.

Can the Church survive?

PEOPLE OF GOD

The Struggle for World Catholicism
Penny Lernoux

Controversial, dramatic, and deeply rooted in solid knowledge and personal insight, People of God is a superbly reported account of the international issues dividing the Roman Catholic Church—issues at the heart of religion in the 20th century. Drawing on her acclaimed journalistic skill and her personal faith, the author of Cry of the People challenges the Church to a future of acceptance, understanding, and vital continued life.

ELECTIONS AND DEMOCRACY IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Edited by John A. Booth and Mitchell A. Seligson

"An exciting and stimulating new contribution to the growing body of literature that has been generated by the current political crisis in Central America."—Michael Dodson, Texas Christian University

Between 1980 and 1985, key elections took place in Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua. By 1986, all the Central American nations had popularly elected presidents and legislatures for the first time in this century. Here, on a country-by-country basis, knowledgeable observers of Central American politics examine these elections and their meaning.

New and Recent Books on Cuba

THE SELLING OF FIDEL CASTRO

THE MEDIA AND THE CUBAN REVOLUTION

William E. Rattliff et al. Introduction by John R. Silber

In The Selling of Fidel Castro, sponsored by the Cuban American National Foundation, scholars and journalists examine the role that the media came to play in the Cuban revolution, its impact on the development of U.S. foreign policy, and in the formation of Western public opinion toward Cuba. They ask and answer tough questions about the media coverage of Cuba: Is Castro's charisma enough to suspend the critical judgment of supposedly hardhitting and skeptical journalists? Or has there been a willful suspension of disbelief by the Western press? Finally, was the media's role determinant in deciding the course of the Cuban revolution?

CUBAN COMMUNISM

SIXTH EDITION

Irving Louis Horowitz

Cuban Communism is the standard reference work and text in the field of Cuban studies. This 744-page compendium features thirty-five distinguished essays, most new, and reflects the rapidly advancing state of social research on postrevolutionary Cuba. A new History section has been added to the four major areas. In concert, they explain the structure and function of present-day Cuba: its economy, society, policy, and military. The sixth edition of this classic work is an indispensable guide through the Cuban labyrinth. It includes every major contributor to present-day Cuban studies.

CUBA ANNUAL REPORT: 1985

Department of Research & Policy, Radio Marti

Cuba Annual Report: 1985 is a collection of four quarterly situation reports issued by Radio Marti's Department of Research & Policy that provides key elements of information on domestic and international events that affect Cuba, its government, its people and its role in world affairs. The Report summarizes events in Cuba during 1985 and their possible significance in future trends. The Report presents a conceptual framework within several sectors of analysis of Cuban Affairs—Foreign Policy, Economy, Military Affairs, Political Control, Culture, Sociology and Ideological Control—as well as an Overview, integrating the different sectors from the perspective of the issues that the Cuban government is giving priority to during the quarter covered.
