Courts, Prosecution, and Conviction

Michael McConville and John Baldwin

This book explores the prosecution process in the English legal system. The authors discuss some of its principal features: acquittal without a jury, the pre-trial identification of weak cases, and the ways in which the police gather evidence and in particular the significance of written and oral confessions. The book is an important contribution both to the empirical understanding of what goes on within the criminal justice system, and to the search for a more theoretical model of the working of the system. £12.50

The Foundations of European Community Law

T. C. Hartley

This book is about the basic principles of European Community Law—those aspects of it which will be of interest to all lawyers. It covers the institutional background, the sources of Community law and the legislative power of the Community, and the relationship between Community and national law. £20 paper covers £13.95

An Introduction to the Law of Contract

P. S. Atiyah

This book is primarily intended to give students an overall view of the subject, either at the commencement of their studies or in conjunction with established textbooks. The new edition has been extensively revised and brought up to date, and the opportunity has also been taken to introduce the student to the ferment of ideas which have been increasingly affecting academic work on contract law in the past decade or two. £15 paper covers £5.95

The Marginal Seabed in United Kingdom Legal Practice

Geoffrey Marston

This book describes the legislative, executive, and judicial practice of the United Kingdom in respect of the seabed adjacent to its coasts. It traces the historic development, and analyses the legal status of this area and discusses which laws are applicable to it and which courts are competent to adjudicate over matters arising therein. £18.50
