

People in Political Science

Activities

Barbara Kellerman, professor of political science at Fairleigh Dickinson University and adjunct professor of political science at The George Washington University, was recently elected vice-president of the International Society for Political Psychology.

Barbara Kellerman

William F. S. Miles, associate professor of political science at Northeastern University in Boston, was the featured speaker at the second annual conference of the American Studies Association of Nigeria (ASAN), February 26-27, 1992, in Port Harcourt, Nigeria. The title of the address was "American Democracy in the Post-Cold War Era."

Sarah McCally Morehouse, professor of political science at the University of Connecticut, has received a National Science Foundation Visiting Professorships for Women Award for her study of Gubernatorial Coalition Building for nomination and legislative support. She is spending her sabbatical year as a visiting scholar at the Institute of Governmental Studies, University of California at Berkeley.

John S. Odell, professor of international relations and director of the Center for International Studies at the University of Southern California, has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the journal International Organization.

Longin Pastusiak, Polish Institute of International Affairs, was elected as an independent member of the Polish Parliament from the electoral district of Gdansk.

Administrative Appointments

H. Carl Camp, chair, department of political science, University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Susan E. Clarke, Director of the Center for Public Policy Research, University of Colorado at Boulder.

James Clotfelter, professor of political science at The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, has been appointed vice chancellor for administration and planning at the institution.

Robert D. Holsworth, chair, political science department, Virginia Commonwealth University.

Beverly L. Kahn, Assistant Dean, College of Arts and Sciences, Fairfield University; formerly associate professor of political science, The Ohio State University at Mansfield.

John Woolley, associate professor of political science, University of California, Santa Barbara, has been appointed to a two-year term (1991-93) as Director of the Washington Center of the University of California, Santa Barbara.

New Appointments

Douglass Cater, Distinguished Lecturer, Auburn University at Montgomery. Cater recently retired as President of Washington College.

Erik A. Devereux, assistant professor of political science and public policy, School of Urban and Public Affairs, Carnegie Mellon University.

Kate G. Frieson, program associate to the Joint Committee on South Asia, Social Science Research Council.

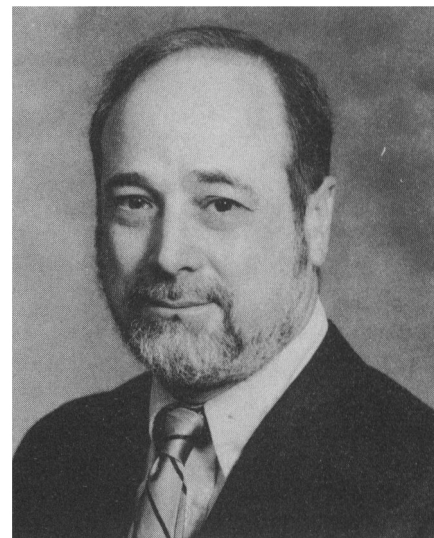

Lori Helene Gronich, program associate to the Committee on International Peace and Security, Social Science Research Council.

Sandra Halperin, assistant professor of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

John H. Mollenkopf, staff associate in urban studies, Social Science Research Council.

Jeffrey J. Mondak, assistant professor of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Bert A. Rockman returns to the University of Pittsburgh in July 1992 as university professor of political science, research professor at the University Center for International Studies, and professor at the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs. He remains affiliated with The Brookings Institution as a Non-Resident Senior Fellow in the Governmental Studies Program.

Bert A. Rockman

People in Political Science

Kenton W. Worcester, program associate to the Joint Committee on Western Europe, Social Science Research Council.

Promotions

Gayle Binion, professor of political science, University of California, Santa Barbara.

Mel Hailey, professor of political science, Abilene Christian University.

Visiting and Temporary Appointment

Pippa Norris, Edinburgh University, is currently visiting the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, until October 1993.

Award Recipients

Harriman Chair

Thomas Mann, Governmental Studies Director, Brookings Institution, has been named the first recipient of the W. Averell Harriman Chair in American Governance.

The Harriman Chair was established at Brookings by Pamela Harriman in honor of the 100th anniversary of the birth of her late husband, W. Averell Harriman, the former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union and Great Britain, secretary of commerce, governor of New York, and adviser to several presidents.

Thomas Mann
Photo by Stephanie Gross

Mann joined Brookings as Governmental Studies director in 1987, overseeing about 30 resident and non-resident scholars studying American governmental and political institutions, processes of policy-making, and domestic policy issues. The program seeks to increase the nation's understanding of contemporary issues of governance and policy.

Mann holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Florida and a master's and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. A former executive director of the American Political Science Association, he has published numerous books, articles, and opinion pieces on various aspects of American politics.

New York State Political Science Association

The following awards were presented by the New York State Political Science Association:

Best Paper by a Faculty Member at the 1991 Annual Meeting:

Madeline Tress, Center for Jewish Studies, CUNY, "The Last Frontier: Women in Gush Emunim."

Best Paper by a Graduate Student at the 1991 Annual Meeting:

Michael John Burton, SUNY at Albany, "The Betamax in Judge Ferguson's Court: Technological Proliferation as a Problem in Judicial Policy-Making (and Deference to Innovation as One Judge's Solution)."

Best Paper by an Undergraduate Student at the 1991 Annual Meeting (2 winners):

John Kania, Niagara University, "The Ramifications of the Participation in Government Courses on Students' Political Knowledge."

Michael Yehl, Alfred University, "Oral Argument and Unanimity in Supreme Court Decision-Making."

International Research and Exchanges Board Travel Grants

The following have received travel grants from the International Research and Exchanges Board:

James M. Broadus, travel to Moscow to continue a cooperative project between The Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution's Marine Policy Center and the USSR Academy of Science's Institute of World Economy and International Relations, entitled "Environmental Security and the World Ocean."

David R. Cameron, to lecture at the 3rd International Political Science School in Tallinn, Estonia on one or more of the following: Markets and Democracy; Creating New Political Parties in the Transition to Confederation in Comparative Perspective.

Samuel Fizman, to bring two scholars from Poland to the U.S. to present papers and participate in a conference at Indiana University on "The Bicentennial of the Polish Constitution of May 3, 1791 and the Tradition of Polish Democracy."

Banning N. Garrett, to explore hypotheses for overcoming the military confrontation in Northeast Asia between the U.S., Japan, and the USSR, by visiting Soviet scholars and officials to discuss the prospects and possible modalities for easing tensions and enhancing security cooperation in the region.

Charles Z. Jokay, travel to Budapest to detail Hungary's "Central European" foreign policy and to assess the ability of such a regional orientation to expedite the country's integration into the European Community, by conducting interviews in research institutes, ministries, and with the diplomatic community.

Anthony Jones, a joint study sponsored by Southern Illinois University, the USSR Academy of Sciences Institute of Sociology, and the National Public Opinion Center in Moscow, which is entitled "Perestroika in Soviet Culture," and is an interpretive survey of major trends in Soviet culture. U.S. project coordinators are Anthony Jones and Dmitri Shalin.

Peter H. Juviler, travel to the USSR