

Activities

James Alt, Harvard University, Margaret Levi, University of Washington, and Elinor Ostrom, Indiana University, are coediting Competition and Cooperation: Conversations with Nobelists about Economics and Political Science, which will be published in 1999. In preparing the publication, they asked two eminent political scientists to discuss the contributions to political science of five economists.

Benjamin R. Barber, Walt Whitman Professor of Political Science, Rutgers University, and director, Whitman Center for the Culture and Politics of Democracy, was the 1998 University of Rhode Island Foundation Distinguished Scholar. His URI Foundation lecture, "Citizens or Consumers? Is Democracy Possible in an Era of Global Markets?", was delivered on October 22, 1998, on the Kingston campus of URI.

Charles T. Barber, professor of political science and chair, University of Southern Indiana, has recently published From Person to Planet: International Politics at Five Levels. The textbook focuses on political, economic, and security issues at five levels: the person, groups, nation-states, regions, and the planet.

Bob Darcy, Regents Professor of Political Science and Statistics, Oklahoma State University, was named by Oklahoma Chief Justice Yvonne Kauger to the newly created Oklahoma Judicial Evaluation Commission. The Commission's charge is to evaluate appellate justices and judges so that the electorate will be in a position to make an informed judicial retention decision.

Robert E. England, professor of political science and director, Fire and Emergency Management Program, Oklahoma State University, was elected to a five-year term on the Stillwater School Board.

Chun-Tu Hsueh, president, Huang Hsing Foundation (USA), has been invited to serve as advisor to Churchill College, University of Cambridge.

Neil Kerwin, provost, American University, has been elected president of the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration.

Paula D. McClain, professor, department of government and foreign affairs, has accepted an invitation to serve on the National Advisory Committee for the "Decade of Behavior" program currently being planned by the National Science Foundation's Directorate for Social, Behavioral, and Economic Sciences.

Administrative Appointments

Bruce Dickson, director, Sigur Center for Asian Studies, Elliott School of International Affairs, George Washington University. Dickson also serves as director of the Elliott School's East Asian Studies Program.

Charles Dunn, dean, School of Arts and Letters, Grove City College; formerly Clemson University.

David Shambaugh, director, China Policy Program, Elliott School of International Affairs, George Washington University.

Bruce Wood, dean of faculty, faculty of economic and social studies, University of Manchester (UK).

New Appointments

Lawrie Balfour, assistant professor of political science, division of history and society, Babson College.

Kirk Bowman, assistant professor, Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Joseph Cammarano, assistant professor, department of political science, Providence College; formerly Syracuse University.

Molly Cochran, assistant professor, Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Jesus Felipe, assistant professor, Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology; formerly Asian Development Bank.

Paul Goren, assistant professor, department of political science, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

Frances Hagopian, associate professor with tenure, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame; formerly Tufts University.

Timothy R. Johnson, assistant professor, department of political science,

FOR THE RECORD

J. Dennis "Denny" Hastert, who taught government and history at Yorkville High School for 16 years, was elected Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives for the first session of the 106th Congress. The 56 year old Republican representative from Illinois' 14th Congressional District was first elected to Congress in 1986, having previously served three terms in the Illinois General Assembly. A graduate of Wheaton College in Illinois, the new Speaker earned an M.A. from Northern Illinois University in 1967.

Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

David C. Kimball, assistant professor, department of political science, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

Timothy B. Krebs, assistant professor, department of political science, University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

Anthony M. Messina, associate professor with tenure, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame; formerly Tufts University.

Susan J. Tolchin, professor of public policy, Institute of Public Policy, George Mason University.

Linda O. Valenty, tenure-track position in U.S. politics, department of political science, San Jose State University.

Promotions

Fred A. Lazin, The Lynn and Lloyd Hurst Family Professor of Local Government, Ben Gurion University, Israel, promoted to the rank of full professor. Lazin will serve as a visiting professor in the departments of political science and urban affairs at Hunter College, CUNY.

Milton Lodge, Distinguished Professor of Political Science, State University of New York, Stony Brook.

Nathaniel I. Richmond, professor of political science, Utica College of Syracuse University. Richmond also serves as coordinator of political and international studies at Utica.

Helena Silverstein, associate professor with tenure, department of government and law, Lafayette College.

Retirements

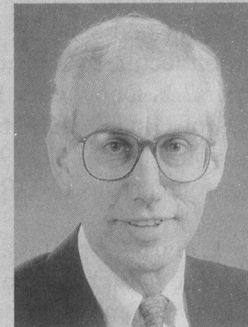

Rick Tilman, professor, department of public administration, University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Walter Broadnax, director of the Bureau of Government Affairs at the University of Maryland, College Park, has been named president-elect of the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration. From 1993 to 1996 Broadnax served as deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

George C. Edwards III, Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the George Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University has been selected as the new editor of Presidential Studies Quarterly. He is the author of numerous publications, including Researching the Presidency (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1993).

Arend Lijphart, research professor of political science, University of California, San Diego, was elected a Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy at the Academy's 1998 meeting in London. Lijphart is also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and of the Royal Netherlands Academy of Sciences.

L. Marvin Overby, professor of political science at the University of Mississippi, has been named executive director of the Southern Political Science Association. A recipient of the Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma in 1991, Overby specializes in legislative redistricting, congressional elections, and partisan politics in the South.

Carole Pateman, professor of political science, University of California, Los Angeles, received the degree of Doctor of Letters, honoris causa, from the Australian National University in October, 1998. She also presented the graduation address at the ceremony for undergraduates and graduates in Arts and Social Sciences.

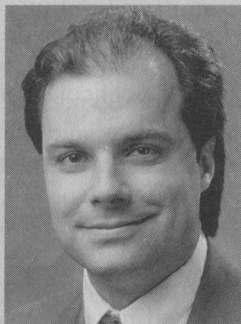

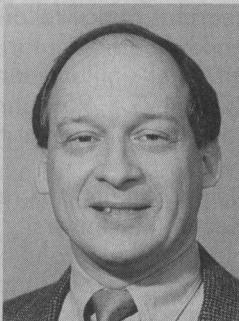

Paul C. Light has been named to the Douglas Dillon Chair at the Brookings Institution. He will also serve as director of the Brookings Center for Public Service. Light joins Brookings after many years of service at the Pew Charitable Trusts where he was most recently director of public policy programs.

Cyril Daddieh has joined the faculty at Providence College as an associate professor in the department of political science. Daddieh will also serve as director of the college's Black Studies Program. Most recently Daddieh was on the faculty at Salisbury State College.

Randall L. Calvert has been named Don Alonzo Watson Professor of Political Science at the University of Rochester. Calvert previously served as chair of the department of political science from 1991 to 1996. An expert in American political institutions, Calvert joined the faculty at UR in 1987 from Washington University.

Stephen Van Beek, associate professor of political science, San Jose State University, has taken a leave of absence to accept an appointment as deputy administrator for the U.S. Department of Transportation's Research and Special Programs Administration.

Anne Hopkins, formerly provost and executive vice president for academic affairs at Miami University, was named president of the University of North Florida in November. Hopkins was selected from a field of more than 100 applicants from across the nation. She previously taught political science at Hobart and William Smith Colleges and the University of Tennessee, and later served as vice provost at the University of Minnesota.

Awards

Minority Scholars Awarded Fellowships

The National Research Council recently named 111 outstanding minority scholars in the 1998 Ford Foundation fellowship programs. Of that number, six are young political science scholars.

Dorian Tod Warren, Yale University

Yvonne Aime Gastelum, Harvard University

Mark Eric Williams, University of California, San Diego

Desmonique Bonet, American University

Noenoe K. Silva, University of Hawaii, Manoa

Ramón G. Vela, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Reuel Rueben Rogers, Princeton University

The program seeks to increase the presence of underrepresented minority groups on the nation's college and university faculties. Information on the next competition can be obtained by visiting the NRC web site (<http://fellowships.nas.edu/>).

Other Awards

Tristan Anne Borer, department of political science, Connecticut College, was named winner of the 1998 Religion and Politics Best Paper Award for "Political Contexts and Religious Identities: The Rise and Fall of Liberation Theology in South Africa," presented at the 1998 APSA meeting in Boston.

Susan E. Clarke, professor of political science, University of Colorado, has been appointed Fulbright Distinguished Chair (the Thomas Jefferson Chair) at the University of Amsterdam for 1998-99 and Visiting Scholar at the University of Bordeaux for spring 1999.

Michael Coppedge and Daniel Brinks, department of political science, University of Notre Dame, have been awarded a research grant from the World Society Foundation to study "Patterns of Diffusion in the Third Wave of Democracy."

Bruce J. Dickson, George Washington University, was awarded a grant from the United States Institute of Peace to continue a project titled

Early Retirement

The December 1998 issue of PS incorrectly noted the retirement of Princeton University professor Stephen Cohen. Cohen has taken Emeritus status at Princeton while also accepting a tenured position as Professor of Russian Studies and History at New York University.

“The Evolving Relationship between the Chinese Communist Party and China’s Private Entrepreneurs.”

Alan Dowty, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, has been awarded a Skirball Visiting Fellowship at Oxford University for the spring 2000 semester.

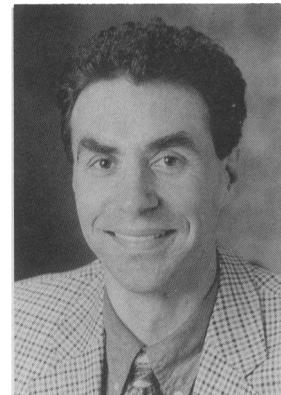

Donald P. Haider, director, Survey Research Center, and postdoctoral associate, University of Kansas, was selected as the 1998 winner of the American Psychological Foundation’s Wayne F. Placek Fund. Haider will receive $24,000 for his proposal, “Hate Crime Law Enforcement,” to study hate crime laws and their implementation and enforcement.

Samuel Krislov, professor of political science and law, University of Minnesota, has been honored with a Lifetime Achievement Award by the Law and Courts Section of the American Political Science Association.

Donald Scruggs, Stephens College, received the Missouri Governor’s Award for Excellence in Teaching for 1998. Scruggs directs the Washington, DC, and Jefferson City Intern programs and codirects the National Model United Nations Program at the college.

KUDOS

Robert Rohrschneider, associate professor of political science at Indiana University, was recently honored with the 1998 Stein Rokkan Prize for Comparative Social Science Research. Awarded annually by the International Social Science Council and the Candido Mendes University of Brazil, the prize is for a substantial contribution to comparative social science research. Rohrschneider was selected for his book, Learning Democracy: Democratic and Economic Values in Unified Germany, to be published by Oxford University Press in 1999.

Rohrschneider’s teaching and research interest is recent political change in advanced industrial democracies, primarily in Western Europe. Rohrschneider has spent a number of years teaching and researching in Germany. In 1991 he was awarded a Social Science Research Council fellowship (Berlin program), which allowed him to interview parliamentarians in Germany. The data from these and a later set of similar interviews provide the basis for Learning Democracy. In 1994–95 Rohrschneider returned to Germany as a visiting associate professor at Humboldt University.

Rohrschneider has recently returned to Germany as a visiting professor at the University of Mannheim and plans to begin work on a project on the revolutionary upheavals in Central Europe. His goal is to analyze the extent to which East and West German political elites developed and express distinct political values as a result of their different regime experiences.

Rohrschneider earned his Ph.D. in 1989 at Florida State University. Before joining the faculty at Indiana University in 1991, he served as an assistant professor in the department of political science at the University of Kentucky.