The Crab Nebula

ÉRIC CHEVILLARD

Translated by Jordan Stump and Eleanor Hardin

Who—or what—is Crab?

Chevillard’s sympathetic yet outrageous portrait of Crab is a postmodernist novel par excellence.

Instructor's Manual

- new introductory anthology built on the premise that those who write literature offer the most useful perspectives on it
- includes 162 commentaries, many by the same authors whose stories, poems, and plays appear in the book
- the most comprehensive selection of fiction in any introduction to literature, chosen by the editor of the best-selling introductory fiction text
- 77 alphabetically arranged stories and 56 commentaries
- 325 poems and 61 commentaries uniquely emphasizes poets as well as poetic analysis
- selection of 19 plays and 45 commentaries chosen for student appeal and instructional flexibility
- 17 writers covered in depth through multiple works and Casebooks of commentaries — more than in any other text
- innovative apparatus maintains the focus on the writers
- abundant but unobtrusive instruction in critical thinking, reading, and writing about literature
- comprehensive Instructor's Manual

“The content is comprehensive and the examples are well-chosen. I particularly like the sense of history and the use of details that personalize Literature and Its Writers. . . . The text ‘talks to’ students as it provides the means for them to become better readers, writers, and thinkers.”

— Iris Rose Hart, Santa Fe Community College

“I am greatly impressed by the wide variety of the selections and the pluralistic approach to cultures and forms. . . I am also drawn to the inclusion of ‘commentaries’ and ‘casebooks’ that demonstrate how the literature is situated within different rhetorical communities.”

— Linda Bensel-Meyers, University of Tennessee — Knoxville
