

People in Political Science

also recently awarded a "1995 Summer Stipend" by the National Endowment for the Humanities to begin a book-length project titled "The Character of Liberalism."

Katja Weber, assistant professor, School of International Affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Promotions

Michael W. Bowers, professor of political science, University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Eloise A. Buker, professor of political science and women's studies, and director, Women's Studies Program, Denison University.

Susan Collins, assistant professor, department of political science, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Philip Davis, reader in american studies, School of Arts and Humanities, De Montfort University, Leicester, UK. Davies was also recently elected secretary, British Association for American Studies.

Bonnie Fisher, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Cincinnati.

Howard Gillman, associate professor of political science with tenure, University of Southern California.

Mark Graber, associate professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Gerald Gryski, professor of political science, Auburn University.

Joe D. Hagan, professor of political science, University of West Virginia.

Timothy M. Hagle, associate professor of political science with tenure, University of Iowa.

John Hamman, associate professor, department of political science, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Russell Hanson, professor, department of political science, Indiana University.

Samuel B. Hoff, associate professor with tenure, department of history and political science, Delaware State University.

James Hollifield, alumni associate professor of political science with tenure, Auburn University.

Joseph A. Ignagni, professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Texas at Arlington.

James M. Lindsay, professor of political science, University of Iowa.

Clifford M. Lytle, University Distinguished Professor, department of political science, University of Arizona.

Steven Maynard-Moody, professor of public administration, University of Kansas.

Robert Montjoy, professor of political science, Auburn University.

Cary J. Nederman, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Arizona.

Barbara S. Romzek, professor of public administration, University of Kansas.

Etel Solingen, associate professor, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine.

Alec Stone, associate professor, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine.

Thomas J. Volgy, professor, department of political science, University of Arizona.

Cynthia L. Weber, associate professor, department of political science, Purdue University.

Retirements

Wasif Abboushi, department of political science, University of Cincinnati.

Stanley Kelly, Jr., professor of politics, emeritus, department of politics, Princeton University.

John P. Lovell, professor, department of political science, Indiana University.

Walter F. Murphy, professor of politics, emeritus, McCormick Professor of Jurisprudence, emeritus, department of politics, Princeton University.

Thomas O. Schlesinger, professor, department of political science, Plymouth State College.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Jeanne Nienaber Clarke, associate professor of political science, University of Arizona, was appointed visiting scholar at the Army Corps of Engineers' Institute for Water Resources in Alexandria, Virginia. Clarke will be spending part of the summer and fall of 1995 in residence at the Institute's offices at the Humphreys' Engineering Center.

Patrick J. Conge, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Arkansas-Fayetteville; formerly University of Minnesota.

Raymond Duch, associate professor of political science, University of Houston, is visiting the Hoover Institution at Stanford University from August, 1995 to January, 1996.

James L. Waite, professor of political science and chair, department of political science and geography, Central Missouri State University, will be a visiting exchange professor at the University of Vaxjo, Sweden, during the 1995-96 academic year.

Awards

AAAS Names New Fellows

The American Academy of Arts and Sciences has announced the election of 7 political scientists among its 162 new fellows. Founded in 1780 by John Adams and other leaders of the young republic, the Academy now includes more than 3800 Fellows and Foreign Honorary Members from a broad range of geographical, professional, and cultural backgrounds. New political science fellows include:

Christopher Achen, University of Michigan;

Larry M. Bartels, Princeton University;

Seyla Benhabib, Harvard University;

Peter A. Gourevitch, University of California, San Diego;

David D. Laitin, University of Chicago;

Guillermo A. O'Donnell, University of Notre Dame;

Bruce Russett, Yale University.

Gareth Evans

Grawemeyer Award

The University of Louisville Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order has selected Australian Foreign Minister Gareth Evans as its 1995 winner. Foreign Minister since 1988, Evans has earned a reputation as a leader in the area of international relations and has played significant roles in developing the United Nations peace plan in Cambodia and helping bring to a conclusion the international Chemical Weapons Convention. Evans earned the Graymeyer Award for an article, "Cooperative Security and Intra-State Conflict," which appeared in the fall 1994 issue of Foreign Policy. The purpose of the Grawemeyer Award is to stimulate dissemination, analysis and testing of outstanding proposals that can lead to more just and peaceful international relations.

Johan Skytte Laureate in Political Science

The Foundation for the Chair in Eloquence and Government of Uppsala University has named Robert Dahl, professor of political science, Yale University, the first Johan Skytte Laureate in Political Science. Carrying a prize of 350,000 Swedish Crowns, Dahl was named "for his penetrating analysis of democratic theory, characterized by deep learning and a breadth of understanding, combined with seminal empirical studies of the functioning or representative government." Dahl will receive the prize at a ceremony in Uppsala on September 30, 1995.

Members of the profession are hereby invited to nominate candidates for the 1996 Skytte prize. Nominations, including a short motivation, should be sent no later than November 30, 1995, to Leif Lewin, Department of Government, Skytteanum, Box 514, S-751 20 Uppsala, Sweden.

Woodrow Wilson Center Fellows

The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars has announced the appointment of 31 Fellows, including nine political scientists, for the academic year 1995-96. Created by Congress in 1968 as the nation's official memorial to its twenty-eighth President, the Center seeks to commemorate both the scholarly depth and the public concern of Woodrow Wilson through the generation of scholarship at the most advanced level. Listed below are the nine political scientists who have been awarded fellowships:

Bruce A. Ackerman, Sterling Professor of Law and Political Science, Yale University;

Judith A. Baer, professor of political science, Texas A&M University;

Mark R. Beissinger, associate professor of political science, University of Wisconsin-Madison;

Bernard R. Crick, professor emeritus of politics, London University, UK;

David J. Danelski, Mary Lou and George Boone Centennial Professor Emeritus of Political Science, Stanford University;

Kiichi Fujiwara, associate professor of political science, University of Tokyo;

Seymour Martin Lipset, Hazel Professor of Public Policy and Sociology, George Mason University;

Scott Mainwaring, professor of government, University of Notre Dame;

Allen S. Whiting, professor of political science, University of Arizona.

Allison Spitzer Wins First Pi Sigma Alpha Scholarship

Allison Spitzer, a graduate of the University of Florida, is the first recipient of the Pi Sigma Alpha Graduate Scholarship. Ms. Spitzer, who graduated in May, 1995 with a B.A. degree in political science, plans to attend Florida Atlantic University where she will pursue an M.A. degree in public administration with a specialization in environmental growth management.

The Pi Sigma Alpha Graduate Scholarship, established in 1994 in the amount of $1,250, is awarded each year to a graduating senior entering a graduate program in political science. For more information about the scholarship or about other programs and services sponsored by Pi Sigma Alpha, please contact the National Office at (202) 483-2515, Ext. 107.

EMGIP Interns

Interns for the 1995-96 Émigré Memorial German Internship Program have been named and assigned offices in Germany.

Jennifer Ann Durst, a 1995 graduate of Amherst College, and Baird J. Webel, Georgetown University, will serve in the German Bundestag during the summer session and Eric Langenbacher, University of Toronto, and Stephanie Plasse, a 1994 graduate of Yale University, will serve the fall term.

Robert E. DiClerico

The following will serve 1–2 month internships in German state parliaments:

Tricia Gabrielson, a 1995 graduate of Georgetown University, Parliament of Saxony;

Andrew Gintert, a 1995 graduate of the College of William and Mary, Parliament of Hesse;

Kelly Schreckengost, a graduate of the Pennsylvania State University, Parliament of Mecklenburg-Vorpommern; and Katherine Mueller, a 1995 graduate of Ohio State University, Parliament of Thuringen.

Other Awards

Guy B. Adams, associate professor and director of graduate studies, department of public administration, University of Missouri-Columbia, has received one of ten awards given by the university for 1995: the William T. Kemper Fellowship for Teaching Excellence, considered to be the most prestigious teaching award in the university, has been awarded to ten faculty each year from 1990–1995.

Allan Chandler, chair, department of political science, Mission College, is among 30 fellows selected from community colleges by the U.S. Institute of Peace to attend a summer seminar on “Approaches to Peace in a Changing World.”

Gary W. Cox, professor of political science, University of California, San Diego, has been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for research on the politics of electoral coalition.

Robert E. DiClerico, professor of political science, West Virginia University, received the 1994 Professor of the Year Award for the State of West Virginia. The award carried with it a $10,000 cash award. He also was named Distinguished West Virginian by Governor Gaston Caperton in a separate ceremony at the State Capitol, March 6, 1995.

Charles W. Dunn, professor, department of political science, Clemson University, received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Illinois State University. Since graduation in 1962, Dunn has served an unprecedented four terms as Chair of the United States J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, in senior staff positions for several members of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives, and on the faculty at Florida State University and the University of Illinois (Urbana). His publications include seven books on American politics. Within the American Political Science Association, Dunn has served as a member of the Committee on Education.

Joe D. Hagan

Sophia Peterson

Joe D. Hagan, associate professor, department of political science, West Virginia University, has garnered three awards, including two outstanding teacher awards and an one for outstanding research. Hagan becomes the first faculty member in the Elbery College of Arts and Sciences to win both the Outstanding Teaching and Outstanding Researcher Award simultaneously. The awards are the University Outstanding Teacher Award, sponsored by the West Virginia University Foundation; the Outstanding Teacher Award and Outstanding Researcher Award, sponsored by the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences.

David D. Laitin, professor of political science and director, Center for the Study of Politics, History and Culture, University of Chicago, has been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship to conduct research on the Russian-speaking nationality in the near-abroad.

Rosalind Pollack Petchesky, professor of political science, and women’s studies, Hunter College, City University of New York, has been awarded a MacArthur Foundation grant.

Sophia Peterson, professor of political science, West Virginia University, received the 1994 Outstanding Service Award in the Eberly College of Arts and Sciences. Peterson's award, the first in the college, was for her work in the West Virginia Statewide Consortium for Faculty and Course Development in International Studies (FACDIS) and for her involvement with the West Virginia public schools.

Joel Rodgers, professor of law, political science and sociology, University of Wisconsin-Madison has been awarded a 1995 MacArthur Foundation Grant.

Kaare Strom, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, has been awarded the ISSC Stein Rokkan Prize in Comparative Social Science Research for his study Minority Government and Majority Rule.

Myron Weiner, professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been selected as the winner of the University of London's Edgar Graham Book Prize for 1994 for The Child and the State in India. The prize is awarded every two years for a work of original scholarship on agricultural and/or industrial development in Asia and/or Africa.

In Memoriam

Evron M. Kirkpatrick

Evron Maurice Kirkpatrick, 83, affectionately known as "Kirk" to a generation of political scientists, died of congestive heart failure at his home in Bethesda, Maryland, on April 26, 1995. He is survived by his wife, professor and former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Jeane J. Kirkpatrick; three sons, Douglas J. of Bethesda, John E. of Miami, Florida, and Stuart A. of Ann Arbor, Michigan; two daughters, Mary E. Evans of Austin, Texas and Anna Kirkpatrick of Aix-en-Provence, France; and six grandchildren.

Kirk's obituaries in the Washington Post, Washington Times, and New York Times quite properly devoted much of their attention to his teaching career at the University of Minnesota (1935–1948), Howard University (1957–1961), and Georgetown University (1959–1984); to his wartime service in the Office of Strategic Services, his postwar service in the Department of State as Chief of the External Research Staff (1948–1952) and Chief of the Psychological Intelligence and Research Staff (1952–1954); to his service as a member of President Kennedy's Commission on Registration and Voting Participation (1963–1964); as a member of other advisory bodies, including President Lyndon Johnson's Task Force on Career Advancement in the Federal Service (1966); and as a charter director of the U.S. Institute for Peace.

This obituary, however, appears in PS, a journal which he helped to found and named. So it seems fitting that we should focus here on Kirk's long (1954–1981) service as the second Executive Director of the American Political Science Association.

Kirk was nominated by APSA President Ralph J. Bunche and approved by the Council in 1954 to succeed Edward Litchfield. Prior to Kirk's installation, the fledgling National Office had concentrated almost entirely on making arrangements for the Association's annual meetings, and had run up a debt of $14,000. Kirk's first action on taking office was to borrow money to meet the office's payroll. Since then the Association, following strategies initiated by Kirk and built upon by his successors, Tom Mann and Cathy Rudder, has become one of most prosperous and respected of the national offices of learned societies.

Early in his term Kirk concluded that the Association should own its own building. In 1968, with considerable help from Kirk's former student and APSA treasurer and legal counsel, Max Kampelman, the Association purchased its own building at 1527 New Hampshire Avenue, NW., in Washington, D.C., and now owns it free and clear. In the late 1950s, Kirk and then-APSA president V.O. Key started the Association's Trust and Development Fund. Contributions and investments made during and since Kirk's service have built the fund to its present balance of $1.8 million. In 1982, the Association also established the Evron M. Kirkpatrick Fund, supported by foundation grants and individuals' contributions, to fund other activities, including the APSA Archives and the Pi Sigma Alpha Oral History Project.

As head of the National Office, Kirk helped to open the Association to African-Americans and women. He actively encouraged the Council to establish the Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession and the Committee on the Status of Women in the Profession, and to establish and fund the APSA Black Fellowships. One of his proudest moments came in 1980 when, in recognition of his encouragement of black political scientists, the Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession honored Kirk with its Annual Award. Another came in 1980 when the Association gave him the Charles E. Merriam award for "significant contributions to the art of government through the application of social science."

During his 27 years as Executive Director, Kirk pursued two main goals: professionalizing the National Office so as to maximize its ability to serve APSA members in their teaching, research, and public service; and enhancing the visibility and reputation of political science.

One of his early initiatives in the pursuit of the first goal was to convince the program committees for the Association's annual meetings to go beyond the ex tempore unwritten statements that had too long been the center of the panels and replace them with article-length papers prepared in advance of the meeting, duplicated by the paper givers' institutions, distributed to the panel discussants, and sold to any interested buyer. He also encouraged publishers to rent space at the annual meetings to display and discuss their books with interested members. Most political scientists today take these arrangements for granted, but in the 1950s they were major innovations.

Under Kirk's leadership, the Association obtained several grants from private foundations to fund summer seminars bringing political