

MUSIC PRINTING IN RENAISSANCE VENICE

The Scotto Press (1539-1572)
JANE A. BERNSTEIN

For over a century, the house of Scotto played a pivotal role in the international book trade, publishing in such varied fields as philosophy, medicine, religion, and music. This work examines the firm's mercantile activities through both a historical study, which fully illuminates the culture and commerce of the Venetian music printing industry, and a catalog, which details the music editions brought out by Scotto during its most productive period.

COMPOSERS AT WORK

The Craft of Musical
Composition
1450-1600
JESSIE ANN OWENS

"[This book] justly deserves to be called remarkable, not only because its deductive and intellectual achievements are so very great, but also because it opens a field of research that will be unknown to many readers.... Thanks to Owens's painstaking and brilliant evaluation of the evidence, we possess a clearer understanding of the processes by which [Renaissance] composers built their pieces...."—John Milsom, Notes

LANYER: A RENAISSANCE WOMAN POET

SUSANNE WOODS

Aemilia Bassano Lanyer published poetry written to and for women in 1611, at the height of the largely misogynistic reign of James I. Woods argues that Lanyer's verse complements and extends our view of her contemporaries—including Spenser, Shakespeare, Jonson, and Donne—whose work in turn provides a context for her unique and engaging voice.

Closet Devotions

Richard Rambuss

"Closet Devotions is a bold and original work. Rambuss asks us to take seriously the relation between sexual and religious affect in the Renaissance devotional lyric, without reducing one to the other. In a series of virtuoso readings, he brings together two previously distant fields of scholarly inquiry, enriching our sense of the affective intensity of religious lyric at the same time that he demonstrates the astonishing scope of human sexuality."—John David Guillory,
