

---

About the Authors

---

Stuart Banner is Professor of Law, Washington University. He has written two books, Anglo-American Securities Regulation: Cultural and Political Roots, 1690–1860, and Legal Systems in Conflict: Property and Sovereignty in Missouri, 1750–1860, and is currently working on a book about the history of capital punishment in the United States.

John R. Bowen is the Dunbar-Van Cleve Professor in Arts & Sciences and Professor of Anthropology at Washington University in St. Louis, where he directs the Committee on Social Thought and Analysis. He is the author of books and articles on Islam, religion, and Indonesian societies, and most recently co-edited (with Roger Peterson) Critical Comparisons in Politics and Culture (Cambridge University Press). He is currently studying reinterpretations of family, Islam, and nation in Indonesia and France.

Amitai Etzioni is the first University Professor of The George Washington University. He served as the Thomas Henry Carroll Ford Foundation Professor at the Harvard Business School (1987–1989), and as Senior Advisor to the White House (1979–1980). He was guest scholar at the Brookings Institution in 1978–1979. For 20 years (1958–1978), he served as Professor of Sociology at Columbia University; part of the time as Chairman of the department. He founded and was the first president (1989–1990) of the international Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics. He is the editor of The Responsive Community: Rights and Responsibilities, a communitarian quarterly. In 1991 the press started referring to Dr. Etzioni as the “guru” of the communitarian movement. He is the author of nineteen books, including The Limits of Privacy (New York: Basic Books, 1999); The New Golden Rule: Community and Morality in a Democratic Society (New York: Basic Books, 1996), which received the Simon Wiesenthal Center’s 1997 Tolerance Book Award; The Spirit of Community: Rights, Responsibilities and the Communitarian Agenda (New York: Crown Books, 1993); and The Moral Dimension: Toward a New Economics (New York: Free Press, 1998). Outside of academia, Dr. Etzioni’s voice is frequently heard in the leading news media, in publications such as The New York Times, The Washington Post, and The Wall Street Journal, and in appearances on network television. A 1982 study ranked Dr. Etzioni as the leading expert of 30 who made “major contributions to public policy in the preceding decade.” He was recently awarded The Seventh James Wilbur Award for Extraordinary Contributions to the Appreciation and Advancement of Human Values by the Conference on Value Inquiry. He also recently received the Sociological Practice Association’s Outstanding Contribution Award. Dr. Etzioni served as the president of the American Sociological Association, 1994–1995. He is married and has five sons.

Bernard E. Harcourt is Associate Professor at the University of Arizona College of Law, where he teaches courses in Constitutional Criminal Procedure, Criminal Law, Capital Punishment, and Law and Political Theory. He practiced capital litigation for several years at the Equal Justice Initiative in Montgomery, Alabama, and more recently completed a Ph.D. in political science. His areas of research include legal, social, and political theory, criminology, and criminal justice. He is currently engaged in a large research project on juvenile gun possession.

William Lyons is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Akron. He recently published The Politics of Community Policing: Rearranging the Power to Punish (1999) with the University of Michigan Press and “The Politics of Crime and Punishment” (co-author Stuart Scheingold) in Criminal Justice 2000: The Changing Nature of Crime (forthcoming, 2000) with the National Institute of Justice. He was also just awarded a Fulbright Fellowship for the academic year 2000–2001 in Beijing, where he plans to continue his study of the political struggles central to neighborhood policing and map out all the best dumpling restaurants in the city.

Austin Sarat is William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Jurisprudence & Political Science at Amherst College and Chair of the Working Group on Law, Culture and the Humanities. His recent books include Divorce Lawyers and Their Clients: Power and Meaning in the Legal Process (with William Felstiner), The Killing State: Capital Punishment in Law, Politics, and Culture, and When the State Kills: Capital Punishment and the American Condition, which will be published by Princeton University Press. In 1997 he received The Harry Kalven Award given by the Law and Society Association for “distinguished research on law and society.” His current research focuses on causes lawyering and the state, pain, death, and law, and law in popular culture. He was President of the Law and Society Association from 1998–1999.

Ronald Weitzer is a professor of sociology at George Washington University. He has written extensively on police-community relations in the United States, Northern Ireland, and South Africa, including his 1995 book Policing under Fire (Albany: SUNY Press). He is also an expert on the sex industry, and has recently published a book on the subject: Sex for Sale: Prostitution, Pornography, and the Sex Industry (New York: Routledge, 2000).

Karen D. Zivi is completing her Ph.D. in the Political Science Department at Rutgers University. Her dissertation examines the connection between rights, liberalism, and feminist politics. Her research has been supported by dissertation fellowships from the Social Science Research Council and Rutgers University.