Figures

1.1	John Tanton with pen and paper at his desk in Petoskey,
	Michigan, in 1986 p	age 53
2.1	A map showing the location of the four counties in Maryland that passed or proposed English-only policies between 2012 and 2013: Frederick County, Carroll County, Anne Arundel County, and Queen Anne's County; Washington, DC, is marked as a point for reference	62
3.1	A map showing Carroll County, which passed an English-only policy; two more linguistically and racially diverse nearby counties	s, Montgomery County and Howard County; and the two major cities in the region. Washington, DC, and Baltimore, Maryland	91

viii