JOURNAL OF SEMITIC STUDIES

edited by

H. H. ROWLEY, Professor of Hebrew Language and Literature in the University of Manchester,

and

P. R. WEIS, Nathan Laski Senior Lecturer in Post-Biblical Jewish Studies, Manchester, published with the support of the

ISAAC WOLFSON FOUNDATION

The Journal of Semitic Studies is now in its fourth year. It is being welcomed throughout the world both for the scholarship of its articles and for the important book review section.

The field of study is a broad one, and the Journal includes articles of linguistic, literary, historical, archaeological, and cultural interest. Jewish studies are especially represented, covering the whole period of Israel's history, save that current affairs are not included. Arabic and Accadian studies have their place also.

Common Ground said of Volume I, Number 1 : " This is a literary venture of the highest importance and, moreover, something in the nature of an innovation. For in this Journal Hebrew and Old Testament literature will be treated in the wider context of Studia Semitica which include Arabic and Accadian. Outstanding scholars have written articles for the early issues and, if we may judge from the standard of the present one, the Journal is assured of a warm welcome from a discerning section of the reading public. Even for the comparative layman there is much which is not only instructive but stimulating."
