Truman, the Jewish Vote, and the Creation of Israel

John Snetsinger, 1974. Employing hitherto untapped manuscript sources of extraordinary richness, Dr. Snetsinger reveals that President Truman was much more deeply involved with [domestic] politics in handling the Palestine issue than is indicated by his memoirs or by those of his Secretary of State (Acheson) or his daughter. Thomas A. Bailey. S39. 208 p. Hard, $6.95

The Soviet Union and the Middle East:

The Post-World War II Era

Ivo J. Lederer and Wayne S. Vucinich, 1974. This collection of essays from a conference held at Stanford University in 1969 shows the full extent of Soviet involvement in the Middle East since World War II. The articles are careful to place Soviet policy shifts in the context of changing political and ideological objectives.

From Paris to Sèvres

The Partition of the Ottoman Empire at the Peace Conference of 1919–1920

By Paul C. Helmreich. An account of the tortuous negotiations that resulted in one of the five peace agreements concluded after World War I, the remarkable Treaty of Sèvres — a document drafted with little real understanding or awareness of the novel forces that had been unleashed in the Near East, and in an atmosphere charged with the traditional European rivalries, imperialist ambitions, and national prejudices that were permitted finally to shape the substance of the pact that was signed. Maps, appendixes, Bibliography, Index. 390 pp., $15.00

The Role of Government in the Industrialization of Iraq 1950-1965

FERHANG JALAL

"This careful, unpretentious and well-documented book, after briefly reviewing Iraq's economic development up to 1950, studies how it was thereafter administered, planned, implemented and financed until 1965; examines fiscal and other supports given to industrialization; and summarizes and draws conclusions, with a glance at changes since 1965. Ferhang Jalal gives more than his title promises, since the book is by no means limited to industrialization."
