LATER LIFE

The Social Psychology of Aging

edited by VICTOR W. MARSHALL

Later Life is a cohesive study of today's foremost issues in the social psychology of aging. This absorbing collection, written by prominent social psychologists in the field of aging, presents varying levels of theorization, both daring and innovative. Based largely on symbolic interactionism and phenomenology, this book examines the basic elements of an interpretive perspective on studies in aging and later life, and critiques prevailing atheoretical and structural-functional approaches in social gerontology. The text concurrently recognizes that aging individuals are embedded in social structural contexts that have their own historical and social imperatives and dynamics.
