Social Philosophy & Policy is an interdisciplinary journal with an emphasis on the philosophical underpinnings of enduring social policy debates. Each issue is dedicated to a particular theme chosen by the editors, with the advice of the editorial board, designed to appeal to both academic specialists and a broader scholarly audience. While not primarily a journal of policy prescriptions, several contributions to each issue will typically connect theory with practice. The editors encourage and actively pursue diversity of viewpoints of contributors. Diversity is also encouraged by selecting contributors from among different disciplines, especially philosophy, economics, political science, and the law. Readers' suggestions for future themes are always welcome, as are inquiries about the topics of issues already planned.

CONTRIBUTORS

Thomas E. Hill, Jr., is Professor of Philosophy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he has taught since 1984. He previously taught for sixteen years at the University of California, Los Angeles, and more briefly at Pomona College, Johns Hopkins University, and (on a visiting appointment) at Stanford University. He is the author of Practical Reason in Kant's Moral Theory (Cornell University Press, 1992) and Autonomy and Self-Respect (Cambridge University Press, 1991), which are collections of essays on Kant's ethics and various moral problems.

Christine M. Korsgaard is Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University, where she received her Ph.D. in 1981. She has taught at Yale, the University of California, and the University of Chicago. Her published essays concern the ethical theories of Kant, Aristotle, and Hume, and contemporary discussions of the relationship between ethics and practical reason. Her current research projects include the development of a Kantian account of personal relationships and an investigation into the ways in which moral philosophers have attempted to establish the normativity of ethics.

David Schmidtz is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Yale University. He is the author of The Limits of Government: An Essay on the Public Goods Argument (Westview Press, 1991). His essay in this volume is part of a larger project on the subject of rational choice and moral motivation.

Robert Sugden is Professor of Economics at the University of East Anglia, England. Born in 1949, he trained at the Universities of York and Wales, and has taught at the Universities of York and Newcastle upon Tyne. He has done research on welfare economics, social choice, the evolution of social conventions, choice under uncertainty, and experimental economics. Currently, he is particularly concerned with the role of rationality assumptions in economics. His most recent book is The Economics of Rights, Co-operation, and Welfare (Basil Blackwell, 1986).

Neera Kapur Badhwar is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Oklahoma. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Toronto in 1986, and was a Killam Postdoctoral Fellow at Dalhousie University in 1986-87. She has published articles in American Philosophical Quarterly, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, Journal of Political Philosophy, Ethics, Dialogue, and Logos, and has an anthology on the philosophical dimensions of friendship forthcoming from Cornell University Press.

CONTRIBUTORS

William A. Galston is Professor at the School of Public Affairs, University of Maryland at College Park, and Senior Research Scholar at the Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy. He is the author of four books and numerous articles in political philosophy, American politics, and public policy. His most recent book is Liberal Purposes: Goods, Virtues, and Diversity in the Liberal State (Cambridge University Press, 1991).

Jean Hampton is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Arizona, and is the author of Hobbes and the Social Contract Tradition (Cambridge University Press, 1986) and (with Jeffrie Murphy) Forgiveness and Mercy (Cambridge University Press, 1988). She has published many articles in moral, political, and legal theory, especially in the areas of contractarian moral theory, history of political theory, retributive justice, and liberalism. She has been a fellow of the American Council of Learned Societies, has held a summer grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and is the recent recipient of a fellowship from the Pew Charitable Trusts.

Roderick T. Long is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has recently completed a book on the free will problem in Aristotle.

Douglas J. Den Uyl is Professor of Philosophy, Chair of the Philosophy Department, and Director of the Masters of Arts in Liberal Studies program at Bellarmine College. He has authored numerous articles and books in the areas of social/political theory and ethics, including Power, State, and Freedom: An Interpretation of Spinoza's Political Thought (Van Gorcum, 1983); The Virtue of Prudence (Peter Lang, 1991); and (with Douglas B. Rasmussen) Liberty and Nature: An Aristotelian Defense of Liberal Order (Open Court, 1991).

Tyler Cowen is Associate Professor of Economics at George Mason University, and has edited The Theory of Market Failure: A Critical Examination (George Mason University Press, 1988). He has published in the areas of public-goods theory, public choice, welfare economics, social discounting of utility, rational-choice ethics, population economics, and the economics of self-control. He is currently working on a book, Explorations in the New Monetary Economics, with coauthor Randall Kroszner.
