The Faces of Reason
An Essay on Philosophy and Culture in English
Canada 1850-1950

Leslie Armour and Elizabeth Trott

Now, for the first time, an extended study of philosophy in English Canada traces its history from 1850 to 1950, examines the major English-Canadian philosophers in detail, and sets them in the context of the main currents of Canadian thought.

Leslie Armour, who holds the Ph.D. from the University of London, is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Ottawa. His major works are Logic and Reality and The Concept of Truth.

Elizabeth Trott, who holds the Ph.D. from the University of Waterloo, has taught philosophy at several Canadian universities. She has written and presented national radio programmes on philosophy and education for the CBC.

"This is the kind of book that I have been looking for for a long while. It is, in its planning and organization, a history of Canadian Philosophy. But in addition, it is also an introduction to modern philosophy of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and the allusions and references to everyone from Plato to the present day make it an introduction to philosophy generally. Even more important, it tells the reader why philosophy is important in culture, what it does, what its relationship to other activities is, and why it is something to know about if one wants to get a cultural picture complete."
— Northrop Frye

"There is nothing, now available, which is comparable to this volume. It meets a very genuine need, in an impressive fashion. The authors' scholarship is sound. They manifest unmistakable expertise in their field of study."— A. H. Johnson
