

WORKING FOR DEMOCRACY

American Workers from the Revolution to the Present

Edited by Paul Buhle and Alan Dawley

"Inequality as a political issue is being debated again in the 1980s. The essays in this volume remind us that the debate is not a new one." — Herbert G. Gutman, author of Work, Culture, and Society in Industrializing America.

Written by some of America's top historians, this is the first book to examine the politics of American workers in terms of broad struggles for power in society at large. Whether the subject is the anti-slavery movement, the Minnesota Farmer-Labor party, the New Deal coalition, the Wobblies, or women workers, Working for Democracy is a testament to the struggles of workers everywhere in America. An ideal introductory text for students, union cardholders, and the public.

ALL DAY, EVERY DAY

Factory and Family in the Making of Women's Lives

Sallie Westwood

Depicts the multi-racial and everyday dramas of working women in the heart of the British hosiery industry and has much to offer both feminist theorists and social historians. Westwood reveals much about the stitchers' daily life and clarifies crucial issues concerning the politics of class, race, and gender in the workplace and the home.

"Makes important contributions to the study of the labor process, to the analysis of women's work and culture, and to the debate about the relationship between Marxism and feminism." — Louise Lamphere, co-editor of Women, Culture, and Society.

Cloth, $21.95; paper, $8.95.

Social History

AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Edited by Janet Blackman and Keith Nield
University of Hull

Social History reached its tenth anniversary in 1985. It has always been concerned with the exploration of links with other disciplines, and with writings of a theoretical and polemical kind which nevertheless retain a sure grasp on the empirical.

It is intended to increase the amount of theoretical work, and also to place a greater emphasis on the medieval and early modern periods. The journal will continue to develop a strong basis of published work in twentieth century social history.

Three issues a year (January, May and October)

Details of subscription rates on application from Associated Book Publishers, Periodicals Department, North Way, Andover, Hants SP10 5BE, England.
