

Preface

We are proud to present this Cambridge Yearbook, one of our largest ever. Chapters 1–17 generally comprise papers which were first delivered in the Cambridge lunchtime seminar series during 2012–13. In the case of the chapter by Nicholas Forwood, this was the text of his 2013 Mackenzie-Stuart Lecture. Chapters 18–24 comprise papers first delivered at a workshop on the External Relations Law of the European Union hosted jointly in Cambridge by the Centre for European Legal Studies (CELS) and Durham European Law Institute (DELI) in October 2012. Robert Schütze kindly helped edit the papers in this section.

As always, we are very grateful to Felicity Eves-Rey, administrator of CELS, for her warmth and fine skills in managing the process of pulling this volume together, to Rebecca Hadgett for her efficient work on references, footnotes and house style, to Kirsty Byrne for her work on polishing the language in some of the chapters, and to Alicia Hinarejos, Christopher Kuner, Amy Ludlow, Eva Nanopoulos, Oke Odudu, Emanuela Orlando, Jens Scherpe and Michael Waibel for their careful reading and commenting on the papers. Finally, we continue to owe a large debt of gratitude to Hart Publishing, and Mel Hamill in particular, for their continued professionalism, patience and support.
